Johnson Asks Roosevelt To Create NRA Board

Chief Will Remain If He Is Requested

Veto Power Over Codes Proposed in Message to Executive.

Permanent organization of NRA, with a board or commission in charge, has been recommended to President Roosevelt by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

The recovery chief, who returned yesterday from a week's vacation, revealed he had asked creation of a board. He emphasized his desire to return to private life by declaring he would not be a member of the commission "if I can avoid it." He hastily added he would remain on the job "as long as the President think he needs me."

First news of a feeling in responsible quarters that direction of the No. 1 recovery unit should cease to be a one-man task was exclusively reported last Saturday in The Post.

"I have definitely recommended to the President," Johnson explained, "that this won't be a one-man job when it passes into the field of administration. I suggested a board or commission."

Action on the proposal probably will be announced by the President on his return from a Hawaiian cruise next month, the administrator intimated.

Reporters Gather.

A throng of reporters filled the General's large, air-cooled office, attracted by expectation of a statement on conflicting reports about the future of NRA which developed during his vacation.

Immaculately dressed in a white linen suit, Johnson answered all questions in his customary rapid-fire manner—but without the barrage of pithy phrases which marked the earlier and more exuberant days of the Blue Eagle.

He made known that official word might be expected in 24 hours on approval of a basic code for some 450 small industries still outside of NRA. This pact will deal principally with wages and hours. It will outlaw child labor.

Johnson said that he hoped to see creation of the new administrative

President Sees New Peace Era

Urges "Live and Let Live" Policy, on Visit to Colombia.

Cartagena, Colombia, July 10 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt told Columbians today that, "We citizens of all the American republics are on the threshold of a new era—an era of peaceful understanding."

Mr. Roosevelt, setting a precedent by stepping ashore on foreign soil while in office, emphasized that his administration at Washington would adhere closely to its enunciated policy of "live and let live."

In a brief address at a reception given in his honor by President Enrique Olaya Herrera in this ancient port on the Spanish Main, the President expressed hope that all peoples would make a persistent effort to understand the problems and the cultures of the separate races and nations that make up the Americas.

"May both our countries from this day forth," he said, "come to honor each other as good neighbors."

The Colombians listened and applauded this second Roosevelt, a distant cousin of another President Roosevelt, who earlier in this century boasted he had seized the Isthmus of Panama from Colombia, made it an independent republic and gained the right to cut a canal through it for the benefit of the North Americans.

"I am indeed grateful to you for your reception," the latter-day Roosevelt said, "and for the friendship which you have shown."

A little later the presidential party returned to the U. S. S. Houston and sailed for Colon, Panama, next stop on Mr. Roosevelt's holiday cruise to Hawaii.

Youth Is Drowned In Patuxent River

Prince Frederick, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Franklin Elliott, jr., 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Elliott, of Brooms Island, near here, was drowned this morning in the Patuxent River when he fell from a rowboat while crabbing.

The rowboat was being towed by a motor launch. Elliott lost his balance, fell into the water and was struck by a box which also toppled from the boat. The blow knocked him unconscious. The body was recovered about two hours later.

Surviving the youth are his parents, four sisters and three brothers. Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Brooms Island.

Golf Title Won By Connelly; Rippy Second

Fighting off a sensational rally on the last nine holes by Claude Rippy, favorite, young John Connelly, former Roosevelt High School student, yesterday coolly hung on to the big lead he had established with a third round 72 to win the District public links championship on the Rock Creek course by a 1-stroke margin. Connelly's final score read 304, to Rippy's 305.

The confident youngster went into the home stretch with a lead of 7 strokes, only to see the heavily favored Rippy steadily cut away the advantage and fall but a stroke short of deadlocking the match. Connelly refused to crack in the face of his rival's brilliant comeback and his ability unperturbedly to sink his putts on the last few holes with his opponent dogging his heels eventually proved his margin of victory.

Two Others Qualify.

In addition to Connelly and Rippy, John Baer and Harlan Will qualified for the National public links championships to be held in Pittsburgh, August 4, the sectional tryouts for which formed a part of the tournament. Will, 1933 champion, finished even with Baer and Harry Saunders, all three having scores of 308, but on the second hole of the play-off Will and Baer shot birdies to become the other two

Auto Looter Tosses $20,000 Stocks Away

Richmond, July 10 (AP).—Twenty thousand dollars in gilt-edged mining stock was just "them old papers" to Joe Austin, 14-year-old colored boy, but $45 worth of clothes was something he recognized as having value. Joe found both "papers" and clothing in a suitcase, police say, he stole from a parked automobile here today.

Arrested on suspicion, the lad said he had discarded the certificates in an alley. Police recovered them and returned clothes, bag and securities to August Weinman, of Ackmen, Colo. Joe went to Juvenile Court officials.

Hubbell Fans Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx in 1st With 2 On; Harder a Hero.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

Polo Grounds, New York July 10. Rankling under as bitter a pill as any ball team ever gulped since the late Abner Doubleday gave the game to America back in 1839, the American League All-Stars late this afternoon summoned from their bats the power to blast the National League's pitching successors to Carl Hubbell and salvage a stirring victory from as dismal a beginning as baseball has known.

Forty-eight thousand fans sat enraptured in those first three innings with this Hubbell man writing a super-sensational chapter of baseball that the 15,000 unfortunates, turned away at the gate, could only conjecture from the cheers of the multitude inside. But more of that, after I relate that Hubbell's pitching went for naught as the American Leaguers surged upon his successors to cram a 9-to-7 defeat down the victory-expectant throats of the National League stars and their adherents.

Overcome 4-to-0 Lead.

Delivered from the annihilating presence of this Hubbell man when Manager Bill Terry withdrew his pitching ace from the game after unveiling him for three innings, the American Leaguers sprang with all their batting might on Hubbell's immediate successors—Lon Warneke, of the Cubs, and Van Mungo, of the Dodgers—to dynamite the 4-to-0 lead of the National Leaguers and lift the banner of the American high over the inter-league battle ground.

But those first three innings

Lupe Velez Will Sue At Once for Divorce

Political Gang Chieftain Slain In Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., July 10 (U.P.).—John Lazia, who stepped from an obscure post in the Italian colony to become a typical gangster figure in American municipal politics, was shot to death today.

The swarthy right-hand man of Tom Pendergast, Nationally known boss of Kansas City's Democratic machine, was slain in front of his hotel home shortly before dawn. Two gangsters emptied a machine gun and a shotgun at him. Eight bullets pierced his body.

Through the morning he battled for life. Three blood tranfusions were given. He was placed in an oxygen tent. He died 11 hours after the shooting.

Last Word to Pendergast.

He told Dr. D. M. Nigro that he could ascribe no motive for the assault nor name his assassins. His last thoughts were for the welfare of his attractive brunette wife, Marie, and Boss Pendergast.

"If anything happens to me, notify Pendergast, my best friend, and tell him that I love him," he gasped.

The assault on Lazia came when he stepped from his motor car, which his friend, Sam (Charlie the Wop) Carolla, had driven into the driveway. Lazia was spun around by the first of a volley of machine gun bullets.

Shot While Down.

The gunmen, armed with a Thompson machine gun and a shotgun, stepped from their ambush behind a brick retaining wall and moved toward the prostrate Lazia, shooting as they advanced.

Then they turned and ran to the

Watchman Killed By Naphtha Blast

West Virginian's Lantern Ignites in Tank Car.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 10 (Spl.). Sticking a lighted lantern into a partially drained tank car of naphtha at a local road surfacing plant late last night to see whether it was empty, Julian Corbin, 32, who had volunteered to help his crippled stepfather on duty as a night watchman, was enveloped in flames when the oil ignited and he was thrown, a human torch, from the car top by two explosions, heard a half-mile away.

Fellow workmen wrapped him in blankets and clothing and smothered out the flames, but not before his flesh had been crisped. He died at a hospital, seven hours later.

The widow, one son, three brothers and two sisters survive. Funeral services are set for Thursday.

So Hot in Cavetown That Egg Hatched Without Hen's Aid

Hagerstown, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Setting hens or incubators would be unnecessary if it remained as hot as it was last week, reports Mrs. Noah Gish, Cavetown.

The Cavetown woman placed a setting of eggs beneath a hen several weeks ago. Friday, 5 of the eggs had hatched and she placed the chicks and their mother in another coop.

Saturday night she heard the cries of a lone chick coming from the coop where she had left the three unhatched eggs, and, investigating, she found it had been so warm that one of the three eggs had been hatched.

31 Feminine CCC Camps To Teach Women How to Work

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Government was shown yesterday to be investing a sizable pile of dollars in a sort of feminine CCC plan, designed to fit women to jobs by a brief but intensive reeducation course.

Thirty-one camps and schools for unemployed, unattached women, each an experiment painstakingly adjusted to its community, will start functioning within the next four weeks.

Twenty-two have been approved. Nine more are under consideration. Each individual camp or school will receive about $5,000, which will exhaust available funds. Enrollment will total about 1,700.

The camps are partially an outgrowth of an insistent interest on the part of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Directed by Miss Hilda Smith, of the Emergency Relief Administration, the camps will stress workers' education.

The program will require a different trend in different localities, making the camps highly individualistic.

The Resident School at Brookings State College (South Dakota) will consist of 50 younger women studying salesmanship, waitressing, or child care; and 10 unemployed teachers from the relief rolls using their younger fellow-students as a "practice field."

Domestic service will be stressed in the school for 30 young women between 18 and 25 years of age, who will spend six weeks studying household management at Berkeley, Calif.

Sixty "white-collar" class girls—stenographers, clerks, school teachers, bookkeepers—will spend two months at the El Paso, Tex., Y. W. C. A. dormitory studying economics and citizenship and keeping in constant touch with their "placement and guidance bureau" for a future job.

Rebuilding the health of the run-down city woman of the "white-collar" class is the first concern of the New Jersey camp, to be located at Tower Twin Lakes.

The rest of the 22 approved camps and resident schools are located as follows: Pittsfield, N. H.; Philadelphia; Clemson, S. C.; Madison and Carroll, Wis.; Indianapolis; Tulsa, Okla.; Ogden, Utah; Minneapolis; Butte, Mont.; New York City; Douglas, Wyo.; Pocatello, Idaho; Salem, Va.; Marquette, Mich.; Weaverville, N. C.; Oberlin, Ohio, and Hallowell, Me.

Future Air Rule Studied By New Board

Howell Is Head of Group That Will Delve in Every Phase.

Unified Aviation Service May Be Program; Seek Foreign Data.

By Frank Getty.

The vision of a unified National air service, embracing direction of commercial and private as well as military flying, was unfolded yesterday as President Roosevelt's newly created aviation commission set to work under the chairmanship of Clark Howell, Atlanta publisher.

Welding of the Nation's wings into a single purposeful unit may be the outcome of the commission's findings when it reports to Congress next February.

Meanwhile, approaching the wide and jumbled field of American aeronautics with "an open mind," the members of the Howell commission will study every phase of flying in the most sweeping and comprehensive inquiry ever conducted in this country.

The future of aviation in the United States, the possibilities of developing an aircraft industry second to none in the world, the entire subject of getting from here to there by airship, flivver plane, glider or rocket ship, fall within the scope of the next six months' investigation.

To Cover All Fields.

Conditions abroad, all the problems of procurement, air mail, interlocking lines, safety and adequate National defense will be studied by the commission, in addition to domestic problems.

There is a strong possibility that a new Cabinet post, to provide unified direction for American flying, may be the result of the present inquiry.

Four of the five members of the new aviation commission met in the Cabinet room of the White House yesterday, and were sworn in. The fifth, Jerome C. Hunsaker, of New York, a retired naval officer and specialist in lighter-than-air craft, was in Europe when his appointment was announced, and will return to Washington in a fortnight.

Those who were sworn in, together with Chairman Howell, were:

Edward P. Warner, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy in Charge of Aeronautics, editor of an aviation magazine, and a former professor of aeronautics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Franklin K. Lane, jr., of California, an attorney and son of the former Secretary of the Interior, and a World War flier.

Army Airman Safe in Crash

Col. Krogstad Is Unhurt in Forced Landing Near Fairfax.

Lieut. Col. Arnold N. Krogstad, chief of the Personnel Division of the office of the chief of the Army Air Corps, narrowly escaped death yesterday afternoon when the motor of his airplane failed and the plane crashed in an attempted forced landing near Fairfax, Va.

Engaged in a training flight, Col. Krogstad was flying over the farm of Dr. F. W. Huddleson, treasurer of Fairfax County, when his motor sputtered and stopped.

Circling the field in an attempt to find a landing area Col. Krogstad's plane slipped and fell into an orchard. The officer was badly shaken up but not seriously injured. He walked to a farmhouse and phoned for aid. Another plane was dispatched from Bolling Field to bring him back to the city.

Meanwhile souvenir hunters carried off a considerable part of the smashed plane.

Wisconsin Dillinger Scare Is Discredited

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 10 (AP).—Another John Dillinger "scare" was virtually discredited tonight although Federal agents and county authorities continued to investigate.

The strongest link collapsed when four youths held at Appleton insisted they abandoned yesterday near Eggersville a stolen automobile which sheriff's deputies reported was punctured with gangster bullets. The boys said they had riddled the car with bullets.

Weather Still Delays Stratosphere Ascent

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 10 (AP).—Directors of the stratosphere flight tonight after scanning latest weather reports set Thursday as the earliest possible date for the take-off.

A cablegram from Commander T. G. W. Settle, wishing Maj. William Kepner and his associates "luck and success" in their enterprise, arrived from China. Commander Settle reached an altitude of about 11 miles, the official American mark the crew here seeks to better, in a stratosphere flight last November.

Republic Steel Discards Union Contracts; Jersey Farm Strike Is Broken

Radicals Overthrown, U. S. Peace Plan Wins

Bridgeton, N. J., July 10 (U.P.).—The Seabrook Farms strike was broken tonight when the strikers overthrew Communist leadership—threatening to lynch an ousted university professor, who was chief agitator—at a spectacular highway mass meeting.

The 200 farmers voted 2 to 1 for the peace proposal of Federal mediators and roughly handled Donald Henderson, former Columbia University teacher, when he insisted the labor war continue.

Peace terms provide for rehiring of strikers without prejudice, setting up a five-man adjustment board and continuance of the present wage scale.

Henderson was first to address the meeting of bedraggled strikers, men and women, who gathered along the concrete road a half mile from the farm's big administration building. The sun beat down on children carrying American flags, who stood on the outskirts of the mob.

The former professor stood on a soap box. Interpreters, scattered through the crowd, explained his utterances to foreign workers.

He demanded that four union representatives be added to the adjustment board. Calling for a vote, he won strong support. Then he charged that David Horuvitz, strikers' attorney, had "sold out."

Horuvitz ran to a nearby box and shouted that the professor was "a damn liar."

He explained the peace terms and asked for a vote on whether the strikers would return to work. His impassioned plea won him a majority of about two to one.

Henderson went to the Administration Building, where he shouted insistently, "the strike isn't over yet!"

Incensed farmers turned upon him.

Cries of "Lynch him!" were taken up, followed by the more moderate, "run him out of the country!" A few seized and pummeled the professor. Police finally led Henderson inside the Administration Building. Later he left in an automobile.

Deputy Is Killed In Harbor Clash

Labor Leaders in Parley at Pittsburgh Silent on Repudiation.

While strikes were threatened yesterday in many cities, outstanding developments in the industrial situation occurred in three sections:

The Republic Steel Corporation, third largest in the industry, announced at Warren, Ohio, that it had thrown out its last contracts with unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Efforts to avert a general strike of 25,000 workers in Minneapolis were deadlocked, with truck drivers setting 8 p. m. today for their strike.

A deputy sheriff was killed as the Pacific Coast longshoremen's strife flamed anew in Seattle. San Francisco's docks were quiet, with a general strike set for Thursday. The Federal Labor Disputes Board continued its efforts to effect a truce.

At Bridgeton, N. J., 200 farmers voted to end their strike at the Seabrook Farms, despite the union committee's appeal, then mauled a former college teacher who urged them to continue their strike, threatening to lynch him.

Warren, Ohio, July 10 (AP).—The steel industry's third largest corporation—Republic—disclosed today it had thrown out its last contracts with unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The corporation said its Warren district contracts with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers had expired June 30, and would not be renewed because of the presence in that organization of a "radical element."

Almost simultaneously rumblings of new steel troubles on a National scale emanated from a meeting in Pittsburgh of the Amalgamated and independent operators to discuss wages.

Heightening the uncertainty, unnamed steel company officials at the Pittsburgh meeting said they understood "other companies may follow" the lead taken by Republic.

Meanwhile at Portsmouth, Ohio,

26 Directors Of Park Bank Face Charges

$1,500,000 Losses to Be Laid at Doors of Officials in Supreme Court!

Twenty-six directors of the closed Park Savings Bank will be named defendants in a suit to be filed this week in the District Supreme Court, it was learned yesterday when attorneys representing John F. Moran, the bank's receiver, said they had prepared a bill of complaint.

The directors will be charged with responsibility for losses of more than $1,500,000 accruing to the bank after its charter expired in 1929. They are to be charged with negligence, failure to supervise, and mismanagement. The suit, in addition to those which are already under way, may result in payments o. 100 per cent of the bank's indebtedness, which is estimated to amount to slightly more than $3,000,000.

Suit against the directors has already been prepared, it was announced by G. B. Springston, who, with J Bruce Kremer and Herbert M. Bingham, is handling the legal affairs of the receiver. Mr. Springston said last night that he hoped to file the suit this week.

The Park Savings Bank was closed shortly prior to the March, 1933, banking holiday. A day or so after its closing Robert S. Stunz, executive vice president and manager, killed himself in the basement of his Kalmia street home. There-

His figures showed four times as many commitments to institutions among single persons as among married.

Hitler Calls Reichstag to Defend Purge

Nazi Chief to Tell Own Story Friday; Foreign Press Condemned.

Berlin, July 10 (AP).—The 100 per cent Nazi Reichstag, inactive survivor of the Republican days, was ordered today to assemble Friday evening for what is expected to provide a dramatic carry-over from the tension and confusion of the "second revolution."

From the lips of Adolf Hitler, himself, the Reichstag, the German people and the world are likely to hear an explanation of the summary executions and other bloody events of June 30 and the days immediately following.

As if in preparation for this "authentic" explanation from the highest source in Germany, Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels in a world-wide broadcast this afternoon lambasted the foreign press for its reports of Hitler's "purge."

While Goebbels lashed out vigorously against numerous European newspapers, he made no charge against any American paper or agency.

Attack on Press.

A large part of the foreign press, he said, "embarked upon a campaign of lies which in its maliciousness can be compared only with the campaign of atrocity tales that were set in the scene against Germany during the war."

The French, British and Russian newspapers especially received a bitter-tongue lashing from Goebbels.

He expressed thanks that "we (in Germany) were given the opportunity to weed out this sort of lying

Mississippi Drys Lead in Balloting

Jackson, Miss., July 10 (AP).—Returns from the first 18 precincts in today's prohibition election put the drys in the lead in both the State and county balloting. The vote in these 18 precincts was: State dry, 1,639; wet, 989; county dry, 1,763, and wet, 875.

Inventor Plans Wall of Rays To Guard Nation From Attack

New York, July 10 (AP).—Nikola Tesla, the inventor, celebrating his seventy-eighth birthday anniversary, declared today he has discovered force rays which can be set like a wall around a nation's borders to render it impenetrable to military attack.

He said he plans to place his inventions at the disposal of the Geneva conference in the interests of peace.

The new rays, he said, would be made of particles, probably dust of some sort, microscopically fine, driven electrically and projected in the form of vast curtains miles high and 100 miles each in length. The particles would travel with the unheard-of velocities of 50,000,000 volts.

Their effect would be so devastating, he claimed, that 10,000 airplanes flying into one of these curtains, would be destroyed to the last machine. He drew a picture of force projecting plants set up every 200 miles along the border. Each would shoot rays 100 miles on either side.

Tesla gave no details of the nature of his apparatus and only the most general description of its powers. He said that the force rays involve advances scarcely conceived by scientists in general.

He did not predict the size of ray plant needed, but intimated that the bulk would not be excessive, for he said such an apparatus could be installed on a battleship, or perhaps even on a submarine.

Particle rays now known to science are composed of fragments of atoms. They travel mostly inside of vacuum tubes. They have also been projected out into the air, but there they travel only a few inches. Rays have no "stopping power," they may cause burns, or some disintegration of objects which they strike, but they would not move even a pin.

Nazis Cancel Drill of Army

Move Designed to Impress Other Nations With Peace Policy.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Berlin, July 10.—Defense Minister Werner von Blomberg suddenly canceled the regular autumn Reichswehr (army) maneuvers today as the third of a series of moves designed to prove Germany's peaceful policies abroad and restore normal civil conditions at home.

Official explanation was that the danger for forest fires because of the long drought might impede the maneuvers.

The other two moves were the enforced July holiday given the Nazi Storm Troops and a similar holiday for the Steel Helmets, war veterans' organization, until August 18. Announcement that the army similarly would give up its grand maneuvers came following significant word from London that France might be willing to accede at last to Germany's demands for a measure of rearmament.

Stolen Car Driver Dies by Own Hand

Officials Say Youth Shot Self as Police Arrive.

Unison, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Gwynn Miley, 19, son of H. H. Miley, of Unison, shot and killed himself at his home here tonight, according to Sheriff E. S. Adrian, of Loudoun County.

Following the fatal shooting, John Galleher, of Leesburg, Commonwealth's attorney, said county officers had learned Miley had been driving a car that was stolen from in front of the Methodist Church in Purcellsville several weeks ago and that the youth shot himself when officers went to his home to investigate.

The car was the property of Shelton Bowen, of Purcellsville.

Republic Steel Throws Union Pact in Discard

the President's new steel board received its first case since it began functioning. The board and the Amalgamated won at least a delay in a threatened strike of 5,000 employes of the Portsmouth works, Wheeling Steel Corporation, (over the discharge of a union official for fighting with a fellow worker).

The board and the union had asked the men for time to study their demands before calling a strike, and the workers acceded.

Republic's announcement today followed by less than two months a speech by Tom M. Girdler, its chairman, who declared:

"Before I spend the rest of my life dealing with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, I'm going to raise apples and potatoes. We are not going to deal with the amalgamated or any other professional union, even if we have to shut down."

Republic's contracts with the amalgamated had endured for 20 years, mills here and at nearby Niles operating more recently with employe representation organizations and unions operating side by side.

Company's Statement.

The company's statement said in part:

"There is great danger that the management of the Amalgamated Association may pass into the hands of the radical element known as the 'rank and file leaders.' These are the men who voted for and almost succeeded in bringing about a Nation-wide steel strike on June 16. * * *

"We believe in collective bargaining and have announced that we are willing to discuss mill problems with any representatives of the men either connected with the representative plan or with any person authorized to represent them as per section 7a of the National industrial recovery act. * * *

"One hundred and sixty-eight cases (under the representative plan) have been brought to the attention of the management at Warren during the last year. One hundred and eighteen of these cases have been settled in favor of the men. * * *

"We do not have orders for our tin mills and sheet mills (in the Warren district) and consequently are not operating, since our customers, on account of threatened labor difficulties and prospective price changes, have stored sufficient material to last them for several months."

Union Leaders Silent On Action of Republic

Pittsburgh, July 10 (AP).—Withdrawal of the Republic Steel Corporation from contract negotiations with the Amalgamated Steel Workers Union was heard without comment today by union leaders holding their annual wage scale conference with the independent operators.

Michael F. Tighe, 76-year-old president of the organization, said he had "nothing to report just now. Mum's the word," he added.

The conferences have been held annually for many years and from them usually came an agreement on the rate of pay for many steel workers, the scale depending on conditions in the industry.

Others among the operators' group were noncommittal, although some asserted the defection of Republic Steel was unexpected and might have an adverse effect upon the present negotiations. It was understood some were awaiting further instructions from their companies.

Federal Board Labors To End Marine Trouble

San Francisco, July 10 (AP). — Faced with increasing threats of a general strike, President Roosevelt's labor disputes board resumed its public hearings today in efforts to get 27,000 striking Pacific Coast maritime workers and their employers to submit to arbitration.

With the general walkout set for Thursday, the board, headed by Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, heard statements from strikers' representatives regarding what they termed "unbearable conditions" for the workers. The board arranged to receive answers later on questions submitted to the shipowners' representatives.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Labor Perkins, in Washington, indicated she felt the maritime strike could be settled if the sympathy strikes of nine other unions were submitted to arbitration.

Miss Perkins Optimistic.

Miss Perkins said she believed the longshoremen and their employers would agree to the three-point settlement proposal offered by mediators several weeks ago. The proposal provided for recognition of the union, submission of all questions of hours and wages to arbitration, and joint control by employers and employes of hiring halls.

The union rejected the settlement because it wanted exclusive control of the hiring halls, the employment agencies from which longeshoremen are sent out to work.

Oscar Rolstad, a chief officer aboard a ship, representing the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union, before the disputes board today outlined the sharp drop in wages and the increase of hours since 1921.

He said in 1920 he received $237.50 a month for eight hours a day, $1 an hour for overtime work, and that the ship on which he was employed had a crew of 43 men.

Thursday Portland Deadline.

At present, he said, his pay as chief officer was $140 a month, with no overtime pay, with the crew of his vessel reduced to 33 men, who are required to work any hours the ship master requests.

At Portland, Thursday noon was set as the deadline for the proposed walkout of organized labor there to support the maritime unions.

A general strike vote was called for last night by the Alameda County (Oakland) Central Labor Council, representing 79 unions with a membership of 32,000, while 20 or more of San Francisco's 120 unions, with 45,000 members, either have voted for a general strike or authorized the labor council's "strike strategy" committee to decide on the question.

At Seattle, Steve S. Watson, 48, a special deputy sheriff, was shot fatally, bringing the total number of deaths since the strike started to seven. The six previous fatalities were strikers or sympathizers. Watson allegedly was attacked by strikers.

National Guardsmen, called on duty after two pickets were killed on the San Francisco water front last week, continued to patrol the district today.

Minneapolis General Strike in Prospect

Minneapolis, July 10 (U.P.).—Efforts to avert a general strike of 25,000 union workers reached an impasse tonight when the Employers Advisory Committee again refused to accept recommendations of the regional labor board.

Officials of the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union stood firm in their announced intention of calling a strike if employers have not met their demands for a closed shop by 8 p. m. tomorrow.

Citizens, fearful that a general strike would paralyze commerce and cut off the food supply of 500,000 persons, watched for action by Gov. Floyd B. Olson, who is vacationing in northern Minnesota.

Tire Strikers in Akron Walk Out on Work Vote

Akron, Ohio, July 10 (U.P.).—Negotiations to end the General Tire & Rubber Co. strike came to an abrupt close today when striking workers walked out of a meeting without voting on a proposal to return to work.

The strike situation reached a climax at the meeting called by Attorney Edwin M. Brouse, acting as a "Citizen of Akron," who promised strikers the right to vote "without coercion."

Will Study Future of U. S. Aviation

Four of the five members of the President's new aviation commission, which will conduct a broad, comprehensive inquiry into the future of flying, were sworn in at the White House yesterday. Filling of Two Posts on Stock Board Is Near Kennedy to Pick Counsel and Secretary Before End of Week.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Appointments of a secretary and general counsel to the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission will be made before the week ends, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the agency, indicated yesterday.

Aside from revealing that the commission had under consideration for the post of general counsel Judge John Burns, of the Massachusetts Superior Court, and Benjamin V. Cohen, PWA lawyer and one of the drafters of the stock market control act, the chairman declined to give any hint as to the identity of possible appointees.

Mr. Kennedy said that Judge Burns had been sounded out regarding the post of counsel, but had not yet indicated whether he would accept the post. He said no offer has been made to Mr. Cohen, although the matter has been discussed with the latter.

Divisions Planned.

The chairman explained that the tentative organization plan for the commission provided for creation of divisions, one to have jurisdiction over stock exchanges, another, to take charge of the registration of securities and another to administer the section of the la wrequiring corporations to make periodical reports. Each division would be responsible to one of the members of the commission. Mr. Kennedy thought he wouldbe left free to keep in touch with all divisions and the work of the other commissioners.

With the responsibilities of the commission not actually starting until September 1, and regarding some provisions of the law not until October 1, the commission will not be in a position to announce its policy for six weeks, Mr. Kennedy said. He explained that the commission would not consider formulation of regulations until the major members of its staff have been employed in order that the latter "might get in on the ground floor."

Replying to questions regarding the commission's probable attitude, Mr. Kennedy said, "None here wants to wipe out the stock market." He added that all the members of the commission saw an opportunity "to try to help things."

"I think the financial and security community generally is ready to cooperate with us," he continued. "I do not believe any one thinks that the majority of those in the security business are out to beat the law. I have yet to meet any one in the securities business or in any line that touches it who has not offered whole-hearted cooperation."

Meanwhile preparations were being made to transfer the administration of the 1933 securities act from the Federal Trade Commission to the ne wagency. The law reuires that this transfer shall take place 60 days after the stock market act was signed by the President —which would be the middle of next month.

It is understood that the personnel, records and books of the securities division of the Trade Commission, under the jurisdiction of Baldwin Bane, will be shifted as a unit to the new agency. Mr. Bane also will go with the Securities Exchange Commission—perhaps in a more important position.

Marginal Loan Regulation.

Meanwhile the Federal Reserve Board sent to the New York Federal Reserve Bank its understanding of its duties in regulating marginal loans under the control act, explaining that its regulations would not be forthcoming for several weeks.

The board, however, informed the New York bank that so far as banks are concerned its authority relates only to loans made for purchasing or carrying securities registered on National securities exchanges.

The board's interpretation stated that its authority does not extend to loans made solely for industrial, agricultural or commercial purposes, irrespective of whether these advances are secured or the nature of the collateral.

General Practices Unaffected.

The purpose of the loan was held by the board to be the determining factor. If a loan is collateraled by stocks or other equity securities and is made for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities, then it is subject to the stock market control act's provisions, the board explained. A loan made for any other purpose is exempted from the provision.

"In general," the board's statement explained, "the law insofar as it applies to control over banks is intended to prevent banks from being used for the purpose of circumventing the margin requirements prescribed for loans extended by brokers to their customers and to prevent undue expansion of bank credit employed in the securities markets.

"General banking practices in relation to loans for industrial, agricultural or commercial purposes are not affected by this act."

Fraternity Honors Johnson; 'I Earned It,' He Declares

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson will visit the University of California July 18.

The purpose of the call, he told reporters yesterday, will be to receive "one of those posthumous Phi Beta Kappa keys."

Heat Wave Rides Southeastern Area

Salina, Kansas, Records Temperature of 111.

Temperatures soaring as high as 111 degrees at Salina, Kans., added discomfort to a sector where the green has been burned out of much of the grass, live stick water holes have been drained dry and growing crops show the need of drenching rains.

Water hauling is a common practice. In Riley County, Kans., agricultural experts began searching today for pumping sites because of a water shortage.

Bank Directors Face Charges

after it was discovered that there was a shortage of about $1,500,000 which was traceable to him, with further losses piling up because of bad loans.

John Cooke Grayson, brother of Admiral Cary T. Grayson, was indicted in connection with the bank's collapse. He is said to have notified Stunz when bank examiners were coming to go over the bank books. Grayson, now seriously ill at his Charlottesville, Va., home, was then a trusted employe of the Treasury Department.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in the District Supreme Court, has already ruled that the directors of the bank, as of August, 1929, were responsible for its accounts as of that date. The charter, secured in Alabama, expired in that year, and was never renewed. He held that they should have then liquidated the bank.

District Tops U. S. Increase In Living Cost

Food and Clothing Show Greatest Gains; Rent Slightly Lower.

The cost of living for families of wage earners and lower salaried workers has increased during the last six months almost twice as much in Washington as in the country at large, the Labor Department revealed yesterday.

While the increase for the Nation was 1 per cent, the gain for the National Capital was 1.9 per cent, which was exceeded by only two other cities, Detroit and Pittsburgh. The cost of living decreased in Los Angeles, Chicago, Mobile and New Orleans.

The greatest gains in living costs were in food, which jumped 2.7 per cent, and clothing, which rose 2.1 per cent. Rent costs fell 1.7 per cent, while fuel and light dropped 2.1 per cent.

"The cost of living has not gone up as fast as the pay roll and wage rates," Secretary Perkins said in commenting on the report. She explained she expected to have a statistical comparison within a few weeks to prove this observation.

Increases Here.

In Washington the cost of food has risen 5.1 per cent since last December, the cost of clothing 2.5 per cent, household furnishings 1 per cent, while rent has fallen 0.5 per cent and fuel and light 2.7 per cent. Living costs now, however, are only 83.7 per cent of an average for 1927-1928 in Washington, as against 79.8 per cent for the country as a whole.

The increase in the cost of living since 1914 is 34.1 per cent for the National Capital and 38.4 per cent for the United States.

During the six months covered in the report rents declined in all but one of the 32 cities surveyed, while the cost of clothing showed an advance in all cities. Food costs showed gains in all but 3 cities, while costs of household furnishings increased in 29 of the 32 cities.

Fuel and light costs gained in 6 cities, but dropped in 24 others, while the average cost in the miscellaneous group showed advances in 18 cities and decreases in 13.

Year's Rise in U. S.

Comparing June, this year, with June, 1933, all of the 32 cities showed increases, with a rise of 6.3 per cent in the general index.

Washington had the smallest decrease in the general cost of living since the 1927-28 high peak, being about 4 per cent under the country as a whole, and also in rent, which has dropped but 14.7 per cent, whereas Birmingham, Ala., experienced a 57 per cent cut in its rent bill.

"In the cities rent usually takes about a fourth of the wage earner's income," Miss Perkins explained, "while in rural areas the cost of food is more important than rent."

The present cost is 33.4 per cent less than in June, 1920, and 16.2 per cent less than in 1929, but 8.5 per cent above June, 1933.

Detroit has shown the largest gain in living costs since last December, while Norfolk, Va., leads the list for the year. Los Angeles experienced the greatest decrease in the half-year period.

New Air Rule Seen as Board Plans Survey

Warner Vice Chairman.

The commission's first act was to select Warner as vice chairman, and to appoint Maj. Carroll Cone, assistant director of air commerce in the Department of Commerce, as executive secretary.

After a meeting with the Baker board, appointed by Secretary of War Dern to make recommendation regarding the Army Air Corps, Chairman Howell outlined his commission's plans, as far as they have been formulated.

The remainder of the week will devoted to organization plans, to finding a home somewhere in the welter of crowded Government buildings, and to arranging for a preliminary survey of American and European airports, commercial lines, aircraft factories and cooperation with other investigating bodies. Counting the two House sub-committees, this is the fifth board of inquiry into aviation matters to work under the present Administration. There have been 15 such boards in the past decade.

The commission, Howell said, will not start its hearings until September. In the meantime, notice will be given to prospective witnesses, in order that they may be fully prepared with their testimony and suggestions.

Many Witnesses.

Apparently there will be no dearth of witnesses, the chairman said. Already he is being deluged with communications from persons desiring to appear and give their views on what should be done about the future of American aviation, the question of a unified air service for National defense, the development of lighter-than-air craft and what not.

This method of giving witnesses plenty of notice worked out most satisfactorily, Howell said, when he was chairman of the National Transportation Commission appointed by President Coolidge to study the railroad problem.

Hearings probably will last throughout September and October, after which the report, required by Congress "not later than February 1, 1935," will be prepared.

Before the hearings start, members of the commission will visit flying fields throughout the country and one member will go abroad to study conditions in England, France and Italy.

Greeted by Baker.

In greeting the new board yesterday, Newton D. Baker, chairman of the Dern-appointed commission which has just concluded its inquiry, suggested such a trip of inspection for comparative purposes.

The Baker board report was approved by its members yesterday and will be signed today and probably presented to Secretary Dern tomorrow. Its contents have not been divulged, although it has been reported that some personnel changes in the Army Air Corps will be recommended. The board heard 115 witnesses.

Whereas the Baker board confined itself to Air Corps matters—and the aftermath of the air mail contracts cancellation—the Howell commission, its chairman said yesterday, will delve into every feature of flying.

A feature of the forthcoming investigation somewhat unusual to Washington is that it is to be entirely constructive, rather than critical.

"We are looking ahead, rather than going into the past," Howell explained.

Covers All Phases.

"The inquiry is to be devoted to discovering what is best to be done in the future, instead of what has been done wrongly up until the present."

Congress, in creating the new board, directed it to make recommendations of "a broad policy, covering all phases of aviation and the relation of the United States thereto."

Something of President Roosevelt's intention was revealed by Howell at the White House when he told of his appointment. The President telephoned the publisher June 30 regarding the chairmanship, and Howell exclaimed:

"What I don't know about aviation would fill a book!"

The President's reply, Howell said, was:

"I know that. That's why I want you to act. I want this problem solved from a business as well as from an expert standpoint."

Aside from Howell and Berres, the commissioners are well versed in aviation matters, however. The commission also will have the services of what technical experts it requires, as $75,000 has been appropriated for its work. It is not the intention to appoint a special counsel, Howell said.

Fletcher Says G. O. P. Must Be Progressive

Tells Young Republicans He May Have His Own "Brain Trust."

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—The Republican party may set up a "brain trust" of its own, Henry P. Fletcher, National chairman, told young Republicans meeting with campaign managers to plan the fall offensive.

"I know our program must be progressive," Fletcher said, after Col. Theodore Roosevelt, here as head of the New York Young Republican Club, had proposed that the party take a stand for social insurance — old-age pensions and unemployment benefits.

"We can't campaign on negatives," said Fletcher, "but we must work within the framework of the Constitution. I am afraid that the country otherwise might have to pay for security by working only as the Government directs."

May Get "Brain Trust."

Declaring that he would take counsel from National leaders to keep Republican policies fresh and alive, Fletcher said:

"If what we get is a brain trust, it will be a brain trust."

Col. Roosevelt directed a sharp attack at the Administration's program, calling it "a colossal scheme to reach into the affairs of every man in the community."

He foresaw, as the result of a program "confessedly aimed at regimentation," a country "frozen into classes, under the rule of an oligarchy."

Condemning business men for "pussyfooting," Col. Roosevelt described the country as "in fear." He warned the Young Republican leaders, representing organized groups in 17 States, that the G. O. P. must do more than criticize.

People Want Security.

"Right now the large part of our people are concerned with how to exist," he said. "They want security, and we've got to meet it. Old-age pensions? Unemployment insurance? They may cost money, but they won't violate the Constitution."

Fletcher warned the Republican club leaders that the coming campaign would be a frugal one, explaining that so far financial support is scanty.

"Although State chairmen pledged enough to wipe out the deficit of $206,000, we've received only $50,000. So I've got a $150,000 deficit to work with.

National Body Planned.

Told by Chairman Fletcher to "write your own ticket," the 100 Young Republican officials came out of their first session with plans for a National organization merging the State groups and a demand for voting power on the party's National committee, at present formed of State chairmen exclusively.

George Olmstead, of Iowa, acting as chairman of the session, said the group had decided to recommend that the new National club take in citizens of from 18 to 36 years of age, both men and women. There are 28,000,000 potential members, 42 per cent of the electorate.

The meeting of Young Republicans was part of three days of intensive precampaign activity on the part of the Republican party's general staff here to line up support and cash for the November elections.

Relief Worker Attack Draws Prison Term

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Andrew Guerriero, 46, today was convicted of assault with intent to kill and sentenced to from 1 to 14 years in prison for an attack with a razor on Miss Frances Allen, 26, a settlement worker.

Miss Allen testified that Guerriero had become angered because she recommended he be cut off from the relief rolls when she found three members of his family employed.

Prince of Wales Rides Grandfather's Tricycle

Coventry, England, July 10 (AP).—A high-wheeled tricycle that once belonged to King Edward VII was trundled up and down the yard of an automobile plant here today by his grandson, the Prince of Wales.

In front of a cheering crowd of workers, Prince Edward mounted the ancient vehicle and pedaled about 60 yards, grinning widely.

Employes and residents of the hotel were awakened by the shots. As Lazia was removed to a hospital, Police Director Otto P. Higgins ordered a clean-up of gangster haunts. Within a few minutes a squad of detectives had seized Joe Lusco, known as Lazia's bitterest enemy in the strife for political domination of the block of more than 60,000 Italian votes. Lusco denied any knowledge of the shooting.

Hitler Will Tell Reichstag Own Story of Purge

Session Called Friday to "Explain to World"; Foreign Press Hit.

journalistic scoundrels," referring to the foreign journalists responsible for the reports he criticized.

The announcement of the Reichstag meeting, which came before Goebbels' speech, was a distinct surprise.

Explanation Promised.

The German press gave no hint as to what Hitler intends to say to his "rubber stamp" parliament, stating only that there will be an "explanation by the government."

Goebbels' speech bristled with denunciation of the foreign reports of Hitler's suppression of "traitors."

"I call upon you to witness," he said, "that there have been cases of lies, slander and misrepresentation of true facts such as are almost without parallel in journalism."

He gave his own version of the events in order to compare them with the foreign reports.

"June 30 passed off without friction, without the slightest domestic tremor," he said.

Says Peace Was Unbroken.

"Peace and order were disturbed nowhere in the entire country. Daily life proceeded in its normal course. The people of Germany went on a holiday as though nothing had happened, or else continued their work without interruption.

"The people in their entirety, however, welcomed with a sigh of relief the deed of Der Fuehrer which saved Germany and thereby the entire world from direst catastrophe.

"A hugh wave of confidence welled up in the entire nation for Adolph Hitler because of his heroic acts."

Reading what he termed erroneous statements from French, English, Austrian and Russian newspapers, and from foreign broadcasts, Goebbels sought to show to the German people that they must not believe what they read in the foreign press.

For instance, he showed that Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen was reported dead by some and was said by others to have succeeded Hitler.

"The campaign of lies was miserably organized," he asserted.

Crisis Is Denied.

"Even if sheets like the London Times declare that a mutineers' report is suppressed with gangster methods, and if one compares with that how dignifiedly, nobly and decently events abroad are treated in the German press," he said, "one can say with perfect serenity, 'Ah, how much better human beings are we savages.'".

Declaring that the foreign reports were "nauseating," Goebbels said that "what has been done in reporting this situation has nothing to do with freedom of expression."

Many countries of Europe recently, he said he believed, had been shaken by convulsions more serious than the "second revolution" of June 30, but German press in each case dealt with events abroad with due reservation and with limitation to the purely factual."

Every foreign journalist, if he were honest, Goebbels continued, would say that there was nothing in the nature of a crisis in the regime, but that "it received its final consolidation through the removal of mutineers."

The German press, he said, is not muzzled, but Germany "has profited by the discipline of the press in that foreign statesmen no longer are attacked or maligned."

"No Censorship."

"Every cabinet member of another country is treated with the same respect as one of our own country," he said, "for we are of the opinion that to undermine the authority even of a foreign government gradually means a lessening of respect for authority in our own country."

The government, he declared, in connection with the events of June 30, "kept back nothing and spoke the truth in everything," leaving no excuse for incorrect news reports.

Turning to accredited correspondents in his discussion, Goebbels said:

"I believe I am speaking in the name of the entire German people if I protest with indignation and disgust and if I declare quite plainly that the German government does not propose henceforth to tolerate foreign correspondents in Germany who in this manner set people at loggerheads and who create an atmosphere that renders impossible every honest and impartial relationship among nations."

Friday's meeting of the Reichstag will be the first since January 30, when a number of new laws were enacted for the third Reich.

Called by Hitler.

The Reichstag abdicated on March 21, 1933, giving Hitler and his cabinet supreme power for four years, but provisions were made for retaining it as "an organ of the Reich for the representation of the German people."

Hitler had been back in Berlin, after his week-end vacation in his summer home in the Bavarian Alps, only a few hours when he called upon the Reichstag to meet.

Among other things which he may discuss is the religious issue, since it has been reliably stated that Catholic bishops have made it a condition of their acceptance of the new concordat interpretation that he announce that he has nothing to do with the "neo-heathen" movement.

Few Other Developments.

There were few other developments of importance in the Reich today.

Emphatic denials were made that Austrian Nazi refugees, such as Theodore Haict and Alfred Frauenfeld, had been harmed in the outbreak of June 30.

A detachment of Storm Troopers at Munich was directed in secret orders to turn in arms in its possessions, as they are the "property of the state."

The propaganda ministry also took occasion to deny reports that Vice Chancellor Von Papen had been questioned again last night by Nazi police.

The government has promised the people that the potato shortage, which has been somewhat alarming in view of the importance of this article in German diet, is being relieved by relaxing import restrictions.

Thomas Starts Poll to Block Stabilization

Harrison Cables Senator He Is Not Abroad for Negotiations.

(Associated Press.)

A poll of al members of the House and Senate was undertaken yesterday by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, in an ttempt to make sure that Go. George L. Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and other bankers, do not succeed in stabilizing the dollar now.

Meanwhile, Gov. Harrison cabled Senator Thomas, asserting that his visit abroad is "not to negotiate any arrangement about anything."

Gov. Harrison's 70-word message was in reply to the Senato's 1,400-word cablegram charging the former with negotiating with European central bankers to stabilize the dollar with the pound sterling, or to enter an agrement for tying it to a fixed weight of gold.

The Senator "warned" the governor not to "usurp" the powers of Congress and protested his "assumed authority to meddle in this way."

Negotiations Denied.

The cable from Gov. Harrison to Senator Thomas, dispatched from Basil, Switzerland, read as follows: "I beg to acknowledge receipt of your cable this morning referring to certain press dispatches concerning purpose of my present trip abroad.

"Whatever may have been reported, the only purpose of my trip is to pay a visit to certain correspondent bnks abroad to inform them regarding conditions at home and to attempt to ascertain as much as I can of conditions here, and not to negotiate any arrangement about anything."

Following up his cablegram, the Oklahoma Senator yesterday made public a letter to all members of Congress saying that "again representatives of New York financial interests are attempting to usurp the power of Congress to formulate monetary policies and to regulate the value of the dollar."

Asks Public Response.

After outlining his reasons for objecting to a dollar with the purchasing power it now has, Thomas concluded:

"If you agree with me that the dollar is still valued too high," that the silver program has not had time to demonstrate its effectiveness, that the regulation of the value of the dollar should not be entrusted to the same private sefish interests whose manipulations of our money and credit brought on the most destructive and costly panic in history, and that the dollar should be regulated in the interests of our people rather than in the interests of bondholders, international bankers and the world gold bloc, then let me have your cooperation in the form of a message which may be given publicity and filed with the President."

Thomas in his letter made no mention of unofficial statements by State and Treasury Department officials to the effect that Harrison was not representing the Government in his discussions in Europe. But the Senate added that "press dispatches have forshadowed for a week without denial" that Harrison was going abroad "to discuss privately * * * possibilities of early stabilization of the pound and dollar on a fixed gold basis."

Charges Secret Agreements.

Thomas said Leon Fraser, president of the Bank for International Settlements as Basel, "has been pulling hard for stabilization."

"He, like other international bankers," Thomas wrote the members, "would sacrifice prompt restoration and stability of our domestic prices to stability in foreign exchange to help international bankers.

"By secret banking agreements the powers that Congress delegated and intended to have used for price rebuilding are eing nullified. Thus the dollars the farmer shall receive the amount of his product that he must give to liquidate interest and debt and to pay freight to banker-owner railroads are determined by these creditor interests that have the most to gain.

"These secret negotiations were unquestionably contemplated and will be carried out whenever international bankers believe it is opportune."

Mrs. Schill branded as "a lie" Moore's story that she gave the $300 with the understanding that if he killed Schill he would not be required to repay the money. Detective Capt. Frank J. Prohaska said.

New U.S. Board Becomes Ruler Of Radio, Wire

Old Commission Fades to Make Room for Broader Unit.

The old Federal Radio Commission, trail-blazer in the field of Federal communications regulation, today will breathe its last gasp as a new and broader Government regulatory body takes over supervision not only of radio, but of all wire companies.

Under chairmanship of Eugene Octave Sykes, the new Communications Commission of seven members will meet this morning formally to organize, while the old Federal Radio Commission does a fade-out.

Organization of three divisions, dealing separately with radio, telephones and telegraph, with two of the new commissioners assigned to each, it one of the first tasks awaiting the unit that may be tackled today.

Rate studies of telephone and telegraph companies, hihterto reporting to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which made little use of its power over wires, will be launched before the summer is out.

New studies of the communications field must be sweeping enough in character to furnish material for a report to Congress not later than February 1, recommending amendments to the present law "deemed desirable in the public interest."

A seperate recommendation must be made on desirability of Congress enacting legislation setting aside a given percentage of radio facilities for the use of educational, labor and other nonprofit making organizations.

For the present, however, the commission must concern itself with personnel problems, selecting directors of each of the three divisions it sets up; a chief engineer and three assistants; a general counsel and three assistants, and a secretary.

Herbert L. Pettey, secretary of the old commission, is said to be assured of appointment to that office in the new. Although a Republican, Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, chief engineer of the old commission, is being prominently mentioned for the same job with the new commission, and Paul D. P. Spearman, former assistant general counsel of the old agency, is said to be in line for appointment as general counsel of the unit.

Although the old commission has 116 employes in Washington, and 120 in the field, it was said the new organization will be large enough to absorb virtually all of them, and gradually make room for more than the same number over again.

Federal Radio Commissioners Harold A. Lafount, of Utah, and James H. Hanley, of Nebraska, the only two members of the old commission that failed of reappointment to the new, today will go out of office.

Teacher Penalized For Being Married

Mrs. Page T. Kirk, Western High School teacher of 30 years' service, has lost $500 a year because of the temporary application of the marital status clause of the economy act, it was learned yesterday.

Because her husband also was a Federal employe, Mrs. Kirk was forced to resign in June, 1933. The following September she was reappointed by the President at a cut of $500 a year in salary.

In an opinion sent the District Commissioners yesterday, Controller General McCarl would not permit her promotion back to her former salary. He held that her promotion should be limited to the customary one step—$100 a year.

Paris Agrees To Rearming Plan for Berlin

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

London, July 10 (U.P.).—France, in a surprising about-face, today intimated her readiness to grant important arms concessions to Germany provided Germany joins her proposed east European peace pact.

The United Press learned this was tentatively agreed upon during Anglo-French conversations preliminary to the world naval conference scheduled for next year.

The concession lent new impetus to the weakened arms conference, now adjourned, and gave peace apostles their greatest stimulant since Germany walked out of the Geneva parley last fall.

Word of France's new stand followed closing of the Anglo-French naval talks, and a brief conference among the French and United States delegates at Norman Davis' headquarters in the Hyde Park Hotel. Davis, head of the American group, will continue preliminary naval talks with French experts tomorrow.

"Most Important" Results.

Authortative information available after the departure of French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou for Paris tonight indicated the results of the two-day talks in London generally were regarded as among the most important postwar peace moves.

The impression not only of the participants but also informed impartial governments is that the outcome signifies a vital step toward consolidation of European peace. Outstanding results, it was learned reliably, include.

1. Britain agreed to assume a benevolently neutral attitude toward the Franco-Russian plan for a seven-power east European pact of mutual assistance, including Germany.

2. Britain was understood to have consented to the French intention of assuring the entry of the Soviet Union into the League of Nations.

Germany Gets Concessions.

3. France intimated readiness to grant important arms concessions to Germany, legalizing a "reasonable German rearmament" provided Germany joins her proposed east European pact.

As a result, new hope sprang in the breasts of the diplomats that a general European convention limiting armaments may yet be signed.

The good work will be carried on tomorrow during Franco-American naval and general arms talks, when Davis and the French naval minister, Francois Pietri, confer with experts on naval affairs from both countries.

The nations to sign the east European treaty are France, Russia, Germany, Poland and the three Baltic states, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Johnson Asks NRA Arbiters Of Roosevelt

board "as soon as there is some coalescence in diverse codes and as soon as we get this basic code for small industries out and a few other things done."

Johnson said his recommendations contained no reference to the Federal Trade Commission. There had been published reports that NRA might take over some functions of the FTC.

"I think, when we move into a period of administration rather than the pioneering work of setting up codes, we will need a little more balance in our organization," Gen. Johnson said. "There shouldn't be any changes in the underlying principles.

"The Government must retain a veto power over codes. I will recommend no organization that doesn't include that principle.

Protect Public.

"There have been suggestions that the code authorities set up a council to run industry. I'm not in favor of that. NRA should protect the public in the interest of the Government."

Johnson smiled in assent, but said nothing when asked if he thought the board should be "nonpartisan." He pointed out such a commission could be appointed by the President through Executive order, but he believed it should be composed of men with experience at NRA.

His recommendations, Johnson disclosed, failed to stipulate how many members should compose the board.

He dismissed as untrue reports that five of his aids would form a temporary board to direct NRA during his vacation. He said Col. George A. Lynch, his administrative assistant, would be in charge and that he would keep in touch with Lynch by telephone.

Asked whether he might remain as NRA head until Congress meets in January, Johnson responded:

"That is the probability, although I hope to get away before then."

Questioned about whether he would make a scheduled speech tomorrow in Waterloo, Iowa, Johnson commented:

"I'll speak unless the President tells me not to."

He referred to one newspaper report that President Roosevelt had ordered him to cancel a speaking tour through the West originally calling for more than a dozen appearances.

"The President told me I had to get out of here for 30 days," Johnson chuckled.

He added he communicated with Mr. Roosevelt to learn how many speeches he should make and as yet had received no answer.

Johnson said he also intended to speak in Portland, Ore., July 15, in Los Angeles July 20, and "in Chicago some time on the way back to Washington."

Speaking Engagements.

Each time he mentioned a speaking engagement he qualified it with the remark, "unless the President thinks I shouldn't."

Johnson said he would take a two-weeks vacation in the West and intended to return here about the time the President gets back.

The steel industry, Johnson disclosed, has requested an exemption from the President's order permitting firms in industries with open price list codes to go 15 per cent below posted prices in bidding on Government contracts. He said he would withhold action until he had opportunity to study the request.

Should the order "really cause cut-throat competition," he said, it will be changed.

He said he had asked code authorities dealing with home building and modernization to seek reduction in prices for persons participating in the new Federal housing program. He intimated he also hoped to obtain cheaper labor costs for such projects.

Asked whether he would object to review of his dismissal of John Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, American Federation of Government Employes, by the new National Labor Relations Board, Johnson replied:

"I would be glad to turn it over to them."

The basic code for small business, other officials explained, would not include comparatively unimportant industries already subject to existing codes. It will embrace, however, virtually all of approximately 5 per cent of American industry remaining to be brought under direct NRA supervision.

No fair trade practice provisions are expected to be included in the basic code.

Meanwhile, Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel and temporarily executive director of the National Executive Council, who is officially on vacation, attended the first meeting of the council since his appointment. He will not assume his duties which include the directorship of the new industrial committee, until he returns from his vacation in August.

200-Year-Old Book Added to Library For Eastern Shore

Chestertown, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Walter R. Gale, secretary-treasurer of the Eastern Shore Society of Baltimore, and Percy Skirven, chairman of the library committee, both of this town, have added another rare volume to the circulating library on the Eastern Shore. The book is 200 years old and the oldest in the collection.

The book was printed in London and is entitled, "Some Memoirs of the Life of Job, the Son of Solomon, the High Priest of Boonda in Africa; Who Was a Slave About Two Years in Maryland; and Afterward Being Brought to England, Was Set Free and Sent to His Native Land in the Year 1734." The work is the handicraft of Thomas Bluett who was in America when Job arrived in the hold of a slaving vessel and who was responsible for the slave's ultimate return to Senegal, in West Africa. Job's grandfather, Abraham, was governor and high priest of the African community.

The story of Job's wanderings has been added to the library, which already boasts 150 books which are being ciculated in the nine Shore counties. Talbot, Wicomico and Queen Annes counties have already been covered. Each county will administer the library for one year.

The books are either about the Eastern Shore or are written by Eastern Shore authors. Job, the slave, was sold to a Kent Island planter and spent his American days in eastern Maryland.

1,000 Invited To Bridge Rite

James Madison Span Will Be Dedicated by Gov. Peery July 18.

Richmond, July 10 (Spl.).—Invitations to 1,000 public officials and civic leaders to attend the opening of the James Madison Bridge at Port Royal, July 18, were being sent out today in preparation for the dedication ceremonies to be conducted by Gov. Peery.

The bridge will span the Rappahannock River from Port Royal, once considered for the National Capital, and Port Conway, birthplace of James Madison. The structure will link the roads of the Northern Neck section with United States highways Nos. 1 and 17.

Besides Gov. Peery, Senator Harry F. Byrd and othed Virginia officials, the program will include participation by Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland.

The Maryland officials and representatives of the Northern Neck section will approach the center of the bridge from the north to meet the Virginia leaders passing from the southern shore. After Gov. Peery has opened the bridge by cutting the ribbon strands at the structure's center, the entire party will proceed to the northern shore for further ceremonies.

Rover to Run Bank Affiliate

Appointed as Trustee in Bankruptcy; Due to Liquidate.

Leo A. Rover, former United States Attorney for the District, has been appointed trustee in bankruptcy for the Commercial National Co., Inc., an affiliate of the closed Commercial National Bank, Fred J. Eden, referee in bankruptcy for the District announced yesterday.

Mr. Rover is expected to proceed with liquidation of the company.

The company, according to Ralph D. Quinter, who has been acting as its receiver since March, 1933, is solvent and if given time will pay its debts fully. Mr. Quinter asked that a trustee in bankruptcy be appointed because, he said, he feared that the Commercial National Bank, the parent company, was about to foreclose on collateral which it held for loans.

According to Quinter, the collateral far exceeded the loans in value, and a foreclosure would result in a loss for the creditors and stockholders of the company.

Norfolk, Va., July 10 (U.P.).—A man who was mysteriously shot and then leaped into the harbor as the steamer George Washington docked here July 1 was identified today as Earl H. Gish, Philadelphia dentist, police announced.

Gish, now apparently recovered, had given his name as Andrew J. Carroll, Pittsburgh, but officers said their evidence indicated the name was assumed. Gish had been missing since May 1, they said. The shooting was accidental, Gish told police. He would not elaborate on the incident.

YOU BET THERE'S A DIFFERENCE IN GASOLINES! . . . HERE'S PROOF!

WHERE THE GOING WAS TOUGH—Bear Mt., N.Y., where 9 leading gasolines competed to see which could pull a 3,400 lb. load farthest up a steep mountain grade. Gulf won!

Don't let anyone tell you that it makes little difference which gasoline you use! There's a big difference in even the best-known brands. To prove it, Gulf made a series of power tests with 33 gasolines—and uncovered some facts worth knowing. Read them!

For that very reason, Gulf chose 15 of America's toughest hills for a series of show-down power tests—in which 33 gasolines fought it out.

On each of these hills, leading gasolines from local service stations competed to see which could take a car and heavy load farthest up hill in high gear before the motor "died."

Here is plain, unpainted evidence—evidence which shows beyond question that it does make a difference which gasoline you put into your tank—a difference you can notice in your motor! Next time try Gulf!

LOADS LIKE THIS—on steep mountain grades tax the power of any gasoline. But in 10 out of 15 power tests Gulf walked away with first honors!

GETTING READY TO START—gas being tested was placed in a jar, which fed direct to the carburetor. This made possible quick changes of gasoline for each test run.

The NEW GULF wins more power tests than 32 gasolines combined

Mrs. Nicholson Hails Jackson, Attacks Ritchie

Dry Leader Says State Has Been "Milked for 15 Years."

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, president of the Dry National Sentinels and long a political foe of Maryland's wet Gov. Ritchie, yesterday made public an open letter to Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, whom she indorsed for Governor as "a man with proven business ability."

Mrs. Nicholson, who was head of the National Women's Law Enforcement League which, after repeal, was replaced by the Sentinels, wrote as follows:

"The latest development of the political situation in our State has not come as a total surprise to those of us who have the best interest of Maryland at heart and who do not expect to profit one way or the other.

"The county voters will not be deceived by the latest move by the Ritchie cohorts for they want to get out of the clutches of a political machine, whose organization has milked the State white for the past 15 years, and be governed by a man like yourself who has already demonstrated a business ability by taking Baltimore City out of two deficits. The counties will look to that type of candidate to lead them rather than a self-serving individual.

"The issue is clear cut. Does the voter wish a business administration in the interest of all the people with lower taxes and a chance at the pie counter, or an administration that has flouted the State constitution and precipitated the worst banking situation in the history of the free State?

"The county people are awake to the situation, not having forgotten the Conowingo deal and the State roads scandal, and if left alone will vote for a change. The first concern of every voter will be to do away with one-man rule and a dictatorship and vote for a man with proven business ability."

Marine Concert Due Thursday

Four Members Arrange Compositions for City Program.

The series of summer festival entertainments in the Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument will be resumed at 8 p. m. tomorrow with a concert by the United States Marine Band, under direction of Capt. Taylor Branson. Four members have arranged compositions.

Siegfried Scharbau has arranged the "Russian Sailors' Dance" from Gliere's ballet, "The Red Poppy," which the band will play in conjunction with the "Dance of the Spirit of Fire" from Gustav Holst's "The Perfect Fool."

Albert Bennert has made the band arrangement of the "Prayer" from Rossini's "Moses in Egypt," in which Albert Schoepper will play the violin solo. Kenneth Douse, who will play Gurevich's "Ballet Fantastique" as a saxophone solo, has arranged the band accompaniment, and Wilfred Kemp, cornetist, will play his own composition, "Fantaisie Capriccioso," which was instrumented by himself.

The program will open with Mendelssohn's overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Other numbers will include Beethoven's fifth symphony and a Wagnerian selection from "Die Meistersinger."

Morgan Heads Chest Gift Unit

Capital Broker Is Familiar With Welfare Affairs Over Long Period.

Charles Carroll Morgan, prominent Washington broker, will serve as chairman of the special gifts unit of the Community Chest fall campaign, it was announced yesterday by H. L. Rust, jr., campaign chairman.

The present co-manager of the G. M.-P. Murphy & Co., Morgan, is a member of the board of managers of the Associated Charities and president of the board of the recently formed Washington Lighthouse for the Blind. His appointment at this time is in line with the Chest's policy of perfecting its organization for the fall campaign, so that all material for workers may be prepared in advance.

"He has served with this unit throughout every campaign and is thoroughly familiar with all the details connected with the work," Mr. Rust said yesterday in announcing his appointment. The new chairman will assume his duties for the fall campaign within a few weeks, it was said.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-mark Applied For)
By Morgan Baker.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Pictures of 16 Government employes, comprising the second section of the 96 typical young Americans as they appeared in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States, are on display in the window of Harris & Ewing (opposite Loew's Palace Theater) this week. The display, to be changed each week for six weeks, will run into August.

INDOLENCE and clock-watching by PWA employes, as charged by Secretary Ickes, are exactly what may be expected in view of the almost wholly political complexion of that organization, Miss Esther Penn, National secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Government Employes, declared yesterday.

BAKER.

Hope was expressed by the employe leader that the citizens throughout the country would distinguish between Civil Service employes and political appointees.

"Government employes have been pictured to the country for years as loafers and time-wasters," Miss Penn said. "That is partly because of an insistent propaganda against them on the part of certain advocates of a low-living scale for workers generally, and partly because the average citizen does not distinguish between those Government employes who regard their positions as their career, and those who deem their jobs as a soft job."

Employes under Civil Service, Miss Penn pointed out, realize that their retention and promotion depend entirely on their own industry, and for that reason give their best to the Government. They are fully qualified when they go on the job, and they have a pride in their work that has been universally recognized by all political parties for decades.

"On the other hand," the A. F. G. E. official continued, "there are in the service of Government many employes whose retention and promotion depend largely, or entirely, on the support of their political backer. They have little incentive to give the best that is in them to the job, and unfortunately, in many cases, are inclined to "soldier' on the job."

Extension of the merit system to all, except key positions, is part of the platform of the A. F. G. E., Miss Penn said in concluding with this bit of advice to Secretary Ickes:

"If the Public Works Administrator would appeal to Congress for authority to place his office under the Civil Service, his complaint would cease."

Five employes of Tabulation Section, Census Bureau, yesterday were transferred to FERA. They are Mrs. Pearl H. Leakin, Mrs. Marie D. Weidman, Mrs. Cora E. Taylor and Mrs. Lillian Murphree.

Phone Decree Puts $786,000 Refund Nearer

Washington Subscribers to Get Rebate by Court Decision.

A refund of approximately $786,000 to Washington telephone subscribers moved a step nearer yesterday when a formal decree, signed by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the District Supreme Court, was filed in the court.

The decree, signed in Boston, Mass., where Justice Adkins is spending his vacation, ordered the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to advertise names of all persons who have refunds coming as of October, 1932, date of the Public Utilities Commission order.

From the date of the advertising, the order.

From the date of the advertising, the company is given three years and 60 days within which to make the refunds. All that can not be made by that time are to be kept by the phone company, but are to be credited to operating income. However, none of the refunds will be made until outcome of an appeal, which the company formally noted yesterday.

The reduction in telephone rates will amount to about 10 per cent per annum for the average subscriber. It will not affect those who haveswitchboards.

A spokesman for the 'phone company said yesterday the noting of the appeal was taken to insure that the company would not lose in the event an appeal was actually taken. It has not been decided, it was said, that the decree would be fought in the higher courts.

Boys' Foul Ball Opens Jammed Door of Auto

Boston (U.P.).—Boys engaged in a sandlot baseball game became panicky when a foul ball soared into a parked automobile.

Converging sheepishly on the car, they were surprised to see the occupant, who proved to be Edward Armand, of New York, grinning broadly. It seems that the ball had crashed against the dashboard and opened a compartment door which had been hopelessly stuck since Armand bought the car.

Federal Board Shows Caution In Labor Strife

Chairman Regional Areas Called Here for Conference.

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday moved cautiously to bring peace in the Nation's spreading industrial strife.

One of its first moves before beginning a detailed study of the 100 cases it inherited from the old National Labor Advisory Board was to telegraph the chairmen of the 20 regional boards, summoning them to Washington for a week-end conference.

As the board settled down to work, rumblings of threatened widespread labor trouble in the steel industry, meanwhile, came from Warren, O., and Pittsburgh. The Republic Steel Corporation announced at Warren, according to the Associated Press, that it had thrown out its last contracts with union affiliated with the American Federation of Laor. The contracts expired June 30.

At Pittsburgh steel company officials said other companies may follow the lead of the Republic. A meeting is in progress there between the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and independent operators to discuss wages.

First Case Received.

The special Steel Labor Board yesterday received its first case, that of a threatened strike in the Portsmouth plant of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, where 5,000 employes were reported ready to walk out. The workers agreed to let the board first study their demands.

The steel board so far has studiously avoided publicity as to its plan of procedure in seeking to reconcile the steel companies and the unions in the steel industry.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Labor Perkins revealed that President Roosevelt was being kept advised of the general strike situation and particularly developments in the arbitration efforts at San Francisco and expressed the hope that a settlement in the longshoremen's strike would soon be effected.

Later, she announced that striking employes of the Seabrooke Farm Co. at Bridgeton, N. J., had agreed to return to work today. More than 400 employes walked out of the plant several days ago, charging violation of an agreement negotiated last April.

Strikers Win Points.

The settlement provided that as many of the strikers as could be absorbed would be taken back at once and that other strikers' names would be placed on the roster and rehired as needed.

The woman Cabinet official also revealed that the Labor and Agriculture Departments are starting an intensive study of the farm labor problems.

Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, informed newspapermen his group would for the time being let the special boards handling the steel and longshoremen situations alone until some definite action was in sight.

"These boards have the same powers as we have," he said, "and we could do very little good at a distance."

The board, which is the supreme court in labor disputes, can intervene in cases handled by the steel and longeshoremen's boards or other industrial boards only when (1) the subordinate board recommends a review, (2) there is a division of opinion on the board, or (3) the Labor Relations Board deems a review will serve the public interest.

Garrison Noncommittal.

Asked about the board mediation powers, Garrison said: "I guess we have the power to suggest anything to anybody, but whether we will is a question of policy."

A reporter asked the officials whether they believe the using gas and machine guns ot quell strikes.

"That's certainly not my method of settling strikes, but I wouldn't advise law enforcement agencies about that, not publicly at least," replied Miss Perkins. Garrison was noncommital.

Early last night, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor made public a telegram he sent to Mayor A. J. Rossi, protesting against "the use of force on the part of the police" in "aiding unreasonable employers to compel striking workers to accept their terms."

Savant Scouts Value of Tests On Intelligence

Some No More Valid Than Astrology Readings, Conference Told.

Some intelligence tests are no more valid in vocational guidance work than astrologers' readings, Dr. Arthur J. Jones, of the University of Pennsylvania, told the George Washington University conference of vocational guidance yesterday.

Although stating that the importance of intelligence tests is overemphasized by many psychologists, Dr. Jones said that the results of tests should be interpreted in the light of all other information available concerning the individual.

He stressed the point that there were many factors of importance in vocational guidance work such as aptitude for certain vocations, personality, social intelligence and others which should be considered along with the results of tests in suggestions as to the career a person should follow.

In fact, Dr. Jones went on to say vocational advice should be given on the basis of a psychological examination, meaning a complete analysis of a person's social and intellectual pattern, rather than on what is commonly termed an intelligence test.

Following the address those attending the conference, many of whom are Washington teachers and students, discussed Dr. Jones' evaluation of the intelligence test. The conference is holding afternoon and evening sessions at Stockton Hall of George Washington University.

Davis Defends Old Order, Hits At Bureaucracy

1924 President Candidate Fails to Take Issue on New Deal.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10 (AP).—In a defense of the "old order," John W. Davis warned tonight against the death of representative democracy "by the slow strangulation of an engirdling bureaucracy."

If it must die, he said, "it would die a noble death in the lightning and storm."

"Surely we have warrant to believe," the 1924 Democratic Presidential candidate told the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, "that within the framework provided by the old order, progress is still possible, reforms are still practicable and recovery is still attainable.

"In the court of reason, in the light of history, the burden of proof rests wholly on those who would persuade us to the contrary."

The New York attorney said he was speaking "neither for nor against the 'New Deal' in the present use of that alluring phrase. Under that title good has been done, no doubt, which no one would wish to undo.

Admires Roosevelt.

"And I share the general admiration evoked by the energy, promptitude and driving power shown by President Roosevelt.

"On the other hand, to approve or reject any policy or group of policies en mass and without analysis is an act solely of emotion, not of reason."

Declaring that he did not wish to be regarded "as an opponent of change" and that "as a liberal I put my faith now and always in the freedom of the human mind," Davis said:

"I am aware that one who comes as I do to lay his humble wreath at the feet of the old order runs serious risks. Someone is sure to denounce him as a Bourbon and others perhaps to baptize him as a Tory.

"He may be invited to be silent until he can bring forth some new thing of his own; although it is not quite clear why one who sees his friend driving headlong toward a precipice must wait to warn him until he can produce a road map of the district."

Asks Greater Faith.

In emphasizing his precept that a greater faith and practice in Democracy should obtain, Davis said the "Supreme Court has sanctioned the doctrine that Congress, having passed a reasonably specific statue, may commit to an administrative department the duty by rules and regulations of 'filling out the details.'

"But that inch having been given, the ell that is taken runs in final statutory form not entirely unlike this: 'Something is wrong in the country which ought to be put right; it is hereby made the duty of the Executive to find out what that something is and to promulgate such rules, regulations, edicts and decrees as he or it may deem useful to correct it.' Draconian penalties are not infrequently attached to discourage those who otherwise might imprudently resist.

"Some State Legislatures have out-Heroded Herod in point of self-abnegation by enacting that the law of the State shall henceforth be whatever Congress has adopted as a recovery act, together with any codes, agreements, licenses, rules and regulations made effective thereunder.

"Unconditional Surrender."

"This is more than cooperation; it is unconditional surrender."

It stands to obvious reason, the attorney said, "that no man, whether the President of the United States or another, either the present high-minded and industrious occupant of that office, or one less gifted, can carry out such commands of himself."

This brings into being, Davis said, the bureaucracy that threatens the existence of democracy.

"For," he said, "be it remembered that, while there are, according to the latest computations I've seen, some 644,000 employes of one grade or another on the Federal pay roll, no single man or woman in the United States has ever cast his or her vote for more than five persons in all that mighty host. These five are the President, the Vice President, two Senators and one Representative. That far no farther runs the voters' choice."

Asserting that "drowning men have clutched at straws ever since the world began," Davis said the "battle cry has always been the same: 'The old order has failed us;' 'Capitalism 'has definitely failed;' 'Away with and let something better be put in its place.'

Defends Capitalism.

"Because in five brief, though painful, years we have fallen on evil days, are we entitled to say forthwith that capitalism has failed as a system? Is it not rather that those who in public or private life undertook to guide the course of events did not measure up to their duties and opportunities?

"Men in office—I am not speaking of America alone—as well as the voters behind them lacked vision; others lacked courage to follow the vision they had. Men in private station, drunk with the desire for easy money, cast off all restraint and forgot the rules of prudence, and some the demands of honor also. But to lay the resulting crash at the door of the capitalistic system is to blame the automobile for the collision instead of the man who drove it.

"I am ready to concede that the capitalistic system is not fool proof, but I want more evidence than we have so far been given before it is abandoned as a proven failure."

The right of private property and the sanctity of contracts, Davis added, "are the twin pillars of the capitalistic system; they stand or fall together. American life, as Americans have known it hitherto, has proceeded upon these principles."

33 County Prosecutors to Present Claims for Yearly Pay.

Richmond, July 10 (Spl.).—Commonwealth attorneys of 33 counties will be heard tomorrow by the State compensation board on the question of compensation to be allowed them under the act of 1934, repealing the fee system and fixing the maximum and minimum pay.

Their actual pay will be established by the board. The General Assembly fixed a $2,500 maximum and a $1,000 minimum.

The board today considered problems of attorneys of the thirty-one counties having a population of less than 10,000. This was the compensation board's first session, composed of E. R. Kent Fretted By Trial Delay

Hastings Murder Suspect May Win Advance in Hearing.

Roanoke, Va., July 10 (AP).—Samuel R. Price, attorney for Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., said today that his client might be given a preliminary hearing before July 30.

Kent, in jail here since June 30 on charges of kidnaping and murdering Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings, is getting impatient.

"What day of the week is today?" he asked this morning, and then added, "I wish they'd hurry up and do something."

His attorney said that it was possible that the hearing date would be moved forward, but it was stated at the office of the district attorney that the hearing was still set for the month-end date. Kent has lost much of the nervousness which was noticed immediately after his arrest, visitors to the jail said. He has been under treatment by a dentist.

The prominently connected war veteran will face both State and Federal charges of kidnaping and murder in connection with the death of Mrs. Hastings, who left her Blue Ridge Springs Hotel with Kent and was found dead, two bullet holes through her head, in Stroudsburg, Pa., several days later. Kent, on advice of his attorney, has made no statement other than to assert that he left the woman in Washington after she told him she did not plan to return to Virginia.

Dog Fickle; Pet Doctor to Decide Canine's Owner

Danville, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—After Snowball, a pedigreed collie, manifested equal affection toward two persons, both claiming to be its master, Magistrate Charles Carter here has ordered that a veterinarian examine the dog to determine its age and settle the question of who owns it.

Snowball was awarded last week to Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Daniels, of Lynchburg, who claimed the dog had been stolen last Christmas. Ella Mae Davis, colored, was accused of the dog's theft and she was placed on trial this morning.

As the trial proceeded, Magistrate Carter was mystified when Snowball showed equal joy and tail-wagging toward the Daniels and Jeannie Wilson, colored, and her husband, of Winston Salem, N. C. The Wilsons claimed the dog's name was Beautie, to which the dog responded. The colored claimants stated the dog was 7 years old and the Daniels averred he was only 5 years old, whereupon Magistrate Carter called upon the veterinarian to decide the case of the dog's ownership.

Danville Youth Gives Orders for Rites, Ends Life

Danville, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Curtis Warren, 19, ended his life by taking poison at his home here this morning.

He was found on the floor of the kitchen. He left a note addressed to his father. Warren specified his own funeral arrangements and requested that his wife not attend the funeral. The coroner rendered a suicide verdict.

Entering his home, Warren asked his young wife where she was going.

"I'm going out," she said.

"You need not, I'm going," replied Warren, who then locked himself in the kitchen.

Police were called, but he was already dying.

Deaf and Blind School Ruler Faces Charges

Richmond Alumni Group Lay Complaints Before Governor.

Richmond, July 10 (Spl.).—Charges of inefficiency and misconduct against H. M. McManaway, superintendent of the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind, are laid before George C. Peery, in a letter from the investigating committee of the alumni association, made public today.

The latter, signed by Benjamin Edward Yaffey, of Norfolk, chairman, requests the governor to take action.

So-called vindications of the superintendent were "unwarranted and unjustified," said the letter.

The letter concludes:

"It is clear even to the layman that Mr. McManaway is a very much undesirable superintendent and that at the most he is completely unfit for further incumbency.

"It is also understandable why the board of visitors prefers to retain Mr. McManaway even in view of the allegations of unfitness and unfairness as shown and proved to be in existence."

McManaway declined to discuss the charge, saying they are the same made last month. The record of that investigation has been filed with the governor, he said.

Peery Reappoints Highway Chairman

Richmond, July 10 (Spl.).—Gov. Peery today formally commissioned Henry G. Shirley as State highway commissioner and chairman of the commission for a new term of four years, ending July 1, 1938.

Mr. Shirley was first appointed chairman by Gov. Trinkle for a term of four years, which began July 1, 1922. He was reappointed by Govs. Byrd and Pollard.

While under his original appointment he was named chairman of the highway commission. His title was afterward changed by legislative act to State highway commissioner, the title formerly held by George P. Coleman, his predecessor.

Presbyterian Youths Meet in Harrisonburg

Enrollment of 471 Held Largest in History of Conference.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—With 471 boys and girls from Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia in attendance, the Presbyterian intermediate camp at the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference this week is the largest in the history of the resort.

The camp is under the direction of Col. Joseph W. Cudliff, of South Carolina. His associates include the Rev. Dwight M. Chalmers, of Charlottesville; the Rev. Hugh Bradley, of Norfolk, and the Rev. J. N. Thomas, of Hollins College.

This is the third group of young people to be at Masssanetta this summer. The annual assemblies of the Baltimore Conference Methodists and the Synod of Virginia Presbyterians each attracted 500 young people. Before the end of the season, with the assemblies of Baptists and Lutherans, Massanetta will have been the Mecca for more than 1,800 young people. Conference officials do not believe this record is equaled by any other Bible encampment.

The annual training school and church workers' conference of the Lutheran Synod of Virginia will be in session July 30 to August 5.

Leaders and speakers include Dr. A. R. Wentz, of Gettysburg Theological Seminary; the Rev. F. W. Otterbein, of Chicago; Dr. Victor McCauley, missionary to India; the Rev. S. White Rhyne, of Philadelphia; Dr. Karl S. Rudisill, president of Thiel College, Greenville, Pa.; the Rev. John B. Mocse, Lutheran Theological Seminary, Columbia, S. C.; Dr. J. C. Longaker, Roanoke College; the Rev. Hugh Rhyne, Marion College; Mrs. Mabel B. Fenner, Elmyra, Ohio; Dr. J. J. Scherer, Richmond; John Kirsenknabe, Harrisburg, Pa.; Dr. G. Morris Smith, president of Susquehanna University, and Judge J. L. Almond, of Roanoke. The Rev. R. H. Anderson, of Lynchburg, is director and manager, and Dr. J. L. Sieber, Roanoke, dean.

The Baptist Assembly will be in session the following week, August 6 to 12. Prof. Inman Jenson, of the Southern Baptist Seminary, will be in charge of the music. The assembly preacher will be Dr. James H. Franklin, of New York City, president of Crozer Theological Seminary. Other speakers include Dr. C. Sylvester Green, of Richmond; Dr. J. M. Cammack, president of Averett College, Danville; Dr. W. Henry Davis, Louisville Theological Seminary; Dr. T. V. Neal, president of Howard College, Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. L. T. Jacobs, Staunton, and Dr. E. B. Jackson, Harrisonburg.

The Sacred Music School, climaxed by the great song festival next Friday, will occupy the Massanetta program next week. The school will be under the direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson, of the Westminister Choir School, Princeton, N. J. Hymn singing contests will be an added feature this year. Church choirs in the three surrounding States and the District of Columbia are preparing for this contest and also for the grand festival choir which will contain 2,000 voices.

Virginian Who Doubted Banks Loses $4,000

Winchester, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Fate dealt a mean hand to Jefferson Davis, a substantial farmer living in the Yellow Springs district of Hampshire County, W. Va., who withdrew $4,000 from a bank for hiding in a cedar box in his house.

It was learned today that while Davis and members of his family were attending a church meeting, his house was ransacked and the money stolen.

A day later, Davis discovered his loss. Since then, officers of Hampshire and nearby counties have been making an investigation, hoping to discover the thieves and recover the funds.

Firebugs Aid Firemen

Four Frederick Youths Start Blaze at Fair Grounds, Leader Confesses, Then Assist in Fight on Flames.

Frederick, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Admitting that they started the fire which destroyed 260 feet of sheep and hog pens at the fair grounds early yesterday morning, Eldridge Fox, Clyde Moxley, James Harding and Joseph Blair, jr., ranging from 18 to 21, were arrested today, charged with arson.

Fox signed a confession that he was the leader and was assisted by his companions. After starting the blaze, the youths drove back to the city in an automobile and arrived at one of the engine houses in time to join the firemen and help fight the flames.

Fox told Chief of Police Bartgis that they got half a gallon of gasoline, drove to the fair grounds, circled the buildings several times to make sure the coast was clear, and then started the fire. After it was under way they drove to the engine house before the alarm was sounded. Firemen checked the blaze as it was leaping from one stall to the other.

They denied having anything to do with several other fires of mysterious origin during the past six weeks.

Two years ago four young men of the Mountville vicinity were arrested charged with setting fire to barns, terrorizing farmers of that section. They are now serving terms in the Maryland House of Correction.

Jackson Joins Farewell Party To Gov. Ritchie

Wishes Him 'Bon Voyage,' but Still Is Opposed to His Reelection.

Baltimore, July 10 (Spl.).—When Gov. Ritchie sails for his European vacation trip tomorrow, his political rival, Mayor Howard W. Jackson will be at the dock to see him off and wish him "bon voyage."

The mayor today accepted an invitation to attend the Ritchie farewell party, and also sent the Governor a telegram wishing him well on his trip. The telegram read:

"It is my sincere hope that your trip to Europe will prove most beneficial and that you will enjoy a quick and complete restoration to good health.

"I regret I am unable to agree that the Democratic party should nominate you for a fifth term, but our differences do not prevent me from telling you that I join with all other people of Maryland in saying 'bon voyage'."

The Governor's impending departure has brought a halt to Democratic political activities. The only statement emanating from party leaders today was an announcement by Senator Millard E. Tydings that he had no comment to make on a report that he was preparing to indorse the Ritchie fifth term campaign.

Senator Tydings also denied he plans an early departure for the Philippine Islands, to remove himself from the Maryland political arena during the campaign. The Senator is interested in legislation pertaining to the islands, and stated today he will not sail until November.

Gambrill Will Seek Reelection to House

Annapolis, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of the Fifth Maryland Congressional District, today announced he would seek reelection on a platform pledging support to President Roosevelt's "New Deal." He filed his certificate of candidacy here with Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner.

Mr. Gambrill, a Democratic member of Congress for the last ten years, was mentioned prominently in connection with the Democratic Senatorial nomination. With George L. Radcliffe an avowed candidate for that place and Gov. Ritchie apparently on the way for renomination for a fifth term, Mr. Gambrill decided to seek reelection.

Since last week-end's shake-down in the Democratic situation here, most of the incumbent members of the House of Representatives from Maryland have turned their thoughts toward reelection.

Cole Seeks Reelection.

Earlier in the week Representative William P. Cole, of the Second District made his declaration.

Mr. Gambrill's district comprises Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert, St. Mary's, Anne Arundel and Howard counties and several wards in South Baltimore. He lives at Laurel. The Democrats usually dominate the district and unless Mr. Gambrill has opposition from within his party, his reelection in November is believed assured.

"Anyone at all conversant with my actions while represetning the Fifth District will, I am sure, say that I have endeavored to perform the duties as their representative in a creditable manner and to that end have given unstintedly of my time and efforts," Mr. Gambrill said in his announcement.

Points to Past Services.

"Due, in part, to the very earnest efforts I have put forth to meet the exacting duties of my office, my health became somewhat impaired, but I am encouraged with the progress I am making toward complete recovery. I am asking for renomination and reelection in the expectation that my past services and what I hope to accomplish in the future will be sufficient justification.

"I may state it has been my pleasure to support President Roosevelt in every measure proposed by him or having his indorsement, save one only—I did vote to restore the salaries of the faithful Government employes, of whom many thousands reside in my district.

"I shall continue to follow the leadership of President Roosevelt, who has brought back to the people of our country renewed hope and confidence in the future. It is too much to expect that the ills of the world can be remedied immediately, but much has been accomplished, and in a continuance of his leadership rests the best interests of our people."

Special Maryland Half Dollars Are Ready to Market

Baltimore, July 10 (Spl.).—Distribution of the first consignment of Maryland tercentenary half dollars is expected to start throughout the State tomorrow, following receipt of a shipment of 10,000 of the coins yesterday from the United States Mint in Philadelphia.

The coins, which will be sold through banks all over Maryland, cost $1 each, or 100 per cent more than their face value. The extra 50 cents from their sale will go toward paying the expenses of the tercentenary celebration at St. Mary's City in June.

Thousands of orders have been received from numismatists all over the country, it was said today at the offices of the tercentenary commission. The coins bear a striking resemblance to the old Lord Baltimore shilling of the seventeenth century. One side shows a profile portrait of Cecil Calvert, while the other side portrays Gov. Ritchie. The coin was issued under a special act of Congress, approved by President Roosevelt.

300 to Join CCC.

Cumberland, Md., July 10 (Spl.). Allegany and Garrett Counties will furnish 300 men, juniors and veterans, through welfare agencies, to the Civilian Conservation Corps during July.

Woodcock Holds Hat Ready To Hurl Into Judgeship Ring

New President of St. John's Seems Likely to Run as Republican.

Baltimore, July 10 (Spl.).—Election to the bench of the First Judicial Circuit in Maryland may be sought by Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president-elect of St. John's College at Annapolis and former prohibition administrator of the United States, Col. Woodcock said today.

He stated that if he decides to run, and he is elected, he will resign as president of St. John's. He added, however, that he sees no inconsistency in campaigning for the judgeship and at the same time retain his college post.

Discussing the possibility of his candidacy, Col. Woodcock said:

"It is true that various persons have called on me with such a suggestion. On the whole, I believe there have been as many Democrats as Republicans among them.

"If I should run, I would have to do so as a Republican. However, I believe that if any office should be filled on a nonpartisan basis it is the judgeship.

"One factor to which I have given considerable consideration was the possibility that Mr. F. W. C. Webb, my law partner for the last 20 years, might become a candidate for the same office as a Democrat. Had that come about I should certainly not have given a moment's thought to my own candidacy, but as the situation now seems to indicate that Mr. Webb will not become a candidate, I have renewed my consideration of the proposal that I run."

Md. Car Dealers Disclose Gains During 1934

Ocean City, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—The fifth annual convention of the Maryland Automobile Trade Association closed here tonight with "an old-fashioned Maryland supper" at the Atlantic Hotel.

The afternoon business session was opened with a speech by A. H. Bishop, president of the association. Mayor William W. McCabe of Ocean City followed with an address of welcome. He presented John E. Raine, general manager and presiding officer, with keys to the city.

Mr. Raine outlined experiences of 40 Maryland dealers before and after passage of the code. The figures revealed, he said, that from January to May, 1933, these dealers sold 2,635 automobiles, as compared with 3,875 for the same period of 1934, representing a gain of 1,240 units.

Used-car losses of the dealers for the first five months of 1933 amounted to $139,544.65, as against a loss of $1,412.90 for the first five months of the year.

The total business transacted by these dealers from January to May, 1933, showed a loss of $169,776.85, while the profit for the same period this year was $223,324.70, he said. By these figures, the dealers are $393,101.55 better off than they were in May of last year.

Another speaker, James Dalton, editor of Motor, predicted that if the code were permitted to collapse, at least one-half of the 30,000 members of the National Dealers Association would be out of business within 90 days.

Other speakers included Isaac U. Everett and Joseph Delaney, representatives of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, National administrator, and Thomas W. Wilson, representative of the National control committee, motor vehicle retailing code. A telegram from Gov. Ritchie expressed regrets at not being able to attend.

$70,000 AAA Wheat Benefits Get Approval

Survey Shows Frederick County Growers Have Fulfilled Contracts.

Frederick, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—A total of 1,428 wheat compliance forms, compiled from a recent survey by 16 supervisors and 3 engineers to determine whether farmers had complied with the provisions of the contracts, will be sent to the wheat department of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration tomorrow.

It is expected that the final installment of benefit checks, aggregating about $70,000, will be sent soon to the contract makers, an initial installment of checks for nearly $100,000 having been distributed last December.

Most compliance forms indicated that contracts had been fulfilled. Slight irregularities in some were adjusted. About a dozen were dropped because of noncompliance. The forms were passed upon by the Frederick County wheat allotment committee.

About 385 corn-hog contracts will be forwarded to the department at Washington later, from which benefits amounting to about $70,000 will be received. These contracts were first sent to the Board of Review, College Park, Md., for initial inspection along with similar contracts from other counties of the State. They were returned to the office of Henry R. Shoemaker, county agent, with instructions to reduce by 20 per cent the number of hogs for market purpose this year. The reduction was made as required. No change was made in the corn acreage or appraisal.

Beginning today, three copies will be made of these contracts, one for the maker of the contract, another to be filed in the office of the county agent and the third for the department at Washington. A total distribution of about $200,000 will be made to farmers in this county who participated in the wheat and corn-hog curtailment plan.

Thomas S. Anderson, secretary-treasurer of the Frederick Production Credit Association, embracing Frederick, Washington, Carroll, Montgomery, Allegany and Garrett Counties, stated today that about $45,000 in loans had been made to farmers of the six counties. About 200 applications for loans have been received, of which 25 await approval. Thomas S. Darby, Gaithersburg, Montgomery County, is president of the association. The loan committee of one member each from Frederick, Carroll, Washington and Montgomery Counties meets once a week at headquarters here to act on applications.

Help for the Injured

First Virginia Highway First Aid Station Dedicated at Stephens City by Red Cross; Rotary Club Gives Equipment.

Stephens City, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—The first Virginia highway emergency first-aid station, also believed to be the first of its kind in the country, was dedicated here today by the Winchester and Frederick Counties Chapter of the American Red Cross. The station is at Fireside Inn on the historic Valley pike, now known as U. S. route 11.

Sponsored by the Winchester Rotary Club, the station was dedicated in the presence of prominent National Red Cross officials, State police and local civic leaders.

The station, Red Cross officials said, is an experiment, which, if successful, will lead to the establishment of a chain of first-aid units along the highways of Virginia and probably the United States.

John L. Teets, of Washington, general field representative of the National Red Cross staff, spoke on "Highway First Aid—A National Experiment" and discussed the increase in motor accidents and the necessity for quick, adequate aid to the injured.

Dowell J. Howard, president of the Winchester Rotary Club, presented the station's equipment on behalf of the organization. The equipment consists of stretchers, splinters, first-aid kits and medicinal supplies. The equipment was accepted by Mrs. Lottie M. Wolfe, owner of Fireside Inn.

Other speakers included Miss Mary Warden Boyd, Winchester, captain of the Red Cross Volunteer Motor Corps, who spoke on first-aid inspection, and State Policeman George Miller, who talked on the "Cooperation of the Police."

Mrs. Bertha M. Hicks, acting executive secretary of the Winchester and Frederick County Red Cross Chapter, stated that plans are under way for additional stations along Route 11 from Winchester to Bristol, Tenn. Stations may also be established on Route 12 from Clifton Forge to Troutville, on Route 60 from Lexington to the West Virginia line via Clifton Forge and on old Route 60 from Natural Bridge to Lynchburg, Mrs. Hicks added.

An informal dinner is to be held July 12 at Hotel Roanoke, Roanoke, Va., when representatives of Red Cross chapters in Botetourt, Roanoke, Bedford, Franklin, Floyd, Montgomery, Craig and Giles Counties and the Cities of Clifton Forge, Lynchburg, Roanoke and Salem will discuss plans for first-aid stations in their respective districts.

State Officers Discuss Parks For Maryland

Baltimore, July 10 (Spl.).—Plans for converting submarginal lands in Maryland into State parks, recreation grounds and game preserves were discussed here today at a meeting of State officials and Government representatives.

The meeting was held at the office of Abel Wolman, chairman of the State planning commission, and attended by Dr. Robert H. Riley, director of the State board of health; E. Lee LeCompte, State game warden; F. W. Besley, State forester; Frank Dryden, CWA engineer for Maryland; Swepson Earle, State conservation commissioner; Dr. E. B. Symons, of the University of Maryland agricultural extension service; Harry Greenstein, Maryland emergency relief chairman, and William L. Galvin, of the board of State aid and charities.

Mr. LeCompte, Mr. Besley and Dr. Symons were named a committee, along with a still undesignated representative from Mr. Green's offices, to present to the Government a comprehensive plan for submarginal land development. This program must be presented before Maryland can share in the $25,000,000 fund set aside for park and recreation development.

Others present at the meeting included H. E. Weatherwax, M. C. Huppuch, and William Nicholl, of the National Parks Service, and Irving C. Root, consultant for the National Planning Board. Mr. Weatherwax urged that Maryland apportion $100,000 for maintenance of the parks and game preserves in the event the Government approves their establishment.

The areas would be purchased by the Government and leased to the State at a nominal price, but the State would be required to maintain them.

Other angles of the Maryland "ten-year" plan of development and expansion were discussed at the meetings but the discussions of the parks program occupied so much of the day that details of the other plans were left for later meetings. A general program, covering all phases of social welfare, utilization of natural resources, and health activities, is to be formulated by State officials.

Hiker Robbed, Beaten by Pals

Florida Resident Is Set On by Itinerant Quartet at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Found beaten, bound and gagged last night on the Washington-Richmond highway south of here, where he had been robbed by four fellow hitch-hikers, James Anderson, 30, was in Mary Washington Hospital, being treated for a possible skull fracture.

The attack occurred, Anderson said, last night shortly after he and four other men who had solicited rides from Richmond on a corn truck were left at the edge of the city about 7 o'clock. His companions, whose identities Anderson said were unknown to him, walked him several miles down the road toward Richmond and attacked him when he refused to give them money with which to purchase liquor.

His assailants tied his hands, stuffed a rag-covered stick into his mouth and struck him with a lead pipe after robbing him of approximately $8.

Charles Hughes, of Washington, found him at the roadside about 9:30 p. m. and drove him to the hospital. Anderson was a resident of Miami, Fla., and was en route to Washington.

FIRST in the low-price field with THE SELF-STARTER

In 1917, buyers of low-priced cars were able to throw away the hand-crank, thanks to Chevrolet.

FIRST with the SLIDING GEAR TRANSMISSION

Chevrolet introduced the modern type of transmission into the low-price field. Others adopted it, years afterward.

FIRST with the SAFETY GAS TANK

Chevrolet led drivers of low-priced cars out of danger, by putting the gas tank at the rear of the car, instead of in front. Eventually, all low-priced cars did the same thing.

FIRST with MODERN DYNAMIC LINES

It was Chevrolet that set the pace for the low-price field in true modern streamlined styling.

FIRST with NO DRAFT VENTILATION

Last year, Chevrolet introduced genuine Fisher No Draft Ventilation. This year, other low-priced cars are trying to catch up with Chevrolet—by claiming the same kind of feature.

On Campaign Issues.

Secretary Ickes has perhaps initiated a public service in issuing orders that the advertising of the General Land Office of the Department of the Interior be placed wherever possible in Democratic newspapers. The discrimination, of course, is abominable. It is a right-handed wallop to the President's pious pretensions of nonpartisan administration. Furthermore it is an insidious entering wedge toward a policy of censorship of the press.

But the habit seems not to be a new one originated in this Administration. The difference is that Secretary Ickes, always forthright, has put the order in writing. With publicity for the abuse, its elimination should follow. Advertising paid for by the taxpayers should be placed in those newspapers where experience teaches it will best serve the taxpayers, not the politicians in office. Otherwise severe injury to the ideal of an independent press will have been countenanced.

Restricting government advertising to newspapers which support the Administration is quite obviously a minor step toward dictatorship. It is ironic that the policy should be announced on the very day that three Administration leaders chose to deny the existence of any trend in that direction.

Postmaster General Farley, in the course of his denials, waxed sarcastic in comments upon Republican campaign methods, saying that they are forced to focus on the Constitution, in lieu of more tangible issues. This two-faced Janus of the Cabinet spoke a little hastily. In any calm appraisal he himself stands out as a distinct, important and stimulating campaign issue.

Ponzi Leaves Us.

In the catalogue of rogues none was ever a more engaging personality than Charles Ponzi. A dozen years ago he ingratiated his way into the hearts of many trusting persons who were induced to believe that he could make them rich overnight. Out of international postal coupons he built up an empire which was even less stable than a house of cards. When it fluttered to the ground thousands of mulcted citizens found Charley still the engaging, smiling, crafty gentleman to whom they had intrusted their savings. He always said, and really believed, that if he had been let alone no one would have lost a cent.

Now, after serving long sentences, he must go back to Italy. The immigration service has not unreasonably decided that he is guilty of some kind of turpitude. In the weary months he spent in prison the dapper little man studied law. When released last winter he announced he had built up an impregnable case against the Government's contentions, and that he would never be deported. His confidence was ill placed. He will go back to Italy, where rumor says that some of the money he got hold of waits to make his declining years comfortable. Ponzi says he has no money there. It doesn't matter much whether he has or not.

For Charles Ponzi, though branded a "common and notorious thief," will get along. He wears his charges well and lightly. He has brains. He is one of the best examples of misdirected energy in the annals of American crime. He may forever be pointed to as one who, had he used his keen, quick-witted senses properly, might easily have become a leading citizen.

But he didn't, and he was caught, and the bright bubble he had so playfully blown in Boston spattered around him. Ponzi predated the boom that ended in 1929. He smiled his way into the good graces of thousands who would never have trusted Wall street, and left them stranded at a time when he couldn't even blame the depression. Well, he has been punished and it may be anticipated that Mussolini won't be too hard on him. For in spite of his crimes and sins, Charley is a likable fellow and, properly directed, might be a real asset to a dictator. They depend on human gullibility as much as Ponzi ever did.

A Realistic Executive.

In reporting upon the record of his first six months of administration, Mayor LaGuardia of New York City forecasts the adoption of a national system of social insurance to replace present unscientific local relief methods. New York's problem is similar to that which confronts the great majority of American municipalities today. Most of them are borrowing, like New York, to cover current relief outlays, in the hope that the emergency will only be temporary.

Mayor LaGuardia refuses to harbor these illusory hopes, and deplores the fact that the city has "already piled up millions of dollars to be paid by future generations in addition to any emergencies they may have to meet in their own day." While looking forward, therefore, to the development of something better than the present dole system, he proposes immediately to raise additional sums by taxation. Methods of raising this needed revenue are already being discussed—a certain indication that the mayor does not propose to impair the credit of the city which he has done so much to restore.

Mayor LaGuardia understands that sound financial methods are essential to any enduring system of relief. He is approaching the problems of his great municipality with an enlightened realism which might well be emulated by the National Administration.

A Timely Warning.

It is not news when business men, faced by increased costs under NRA codes, complain that recovery is being retarded by current wage levels. It is significant, however, when Donald Richberg, general counsel for the NRA, states publicly that "sudden and sweeping increases in labor costs" are likely to bring the country back "upon that same road to ruin from which we turned aside."

As an important official in an Administration which has ardently fostered the impression that the country possesses an inexhaustible fund from which to pay wages, Mr. Richberg is to be congratulated for this thoughtful and realistic observation. Many who are hypnotized by the fine idealism of the New Deal fall utterly to confront the elementary problem of how any business is to operate when expenditures continuously exceed receipts. Of course, the issue can temporarily be concealed by pouring in Government funds, and covering deficits at the taxpayers' expense. But in the long run, under any economic system, operation in the red becomes impossible. And one of the easiest ways in which labor can throw itself out of employment is by demanding wages which make that employment impossible.

It is an open question how far the work-spreading and hour-decreasing policies adopted under the NRA codes are responsible for the wage rates which are beginning to worry Mr. Richberg. The rise is partly due, no doubt, to an improvement in general business which has enabled workers properly to demand and to obtain higher wages. Nevertheless, the increases that have occurred under code regulations have greatly outstripped industrial expansion. Furthermore, widespread complaints of profitless operation testify to a belief that operating costs, especially wage outlays, are in many cases at uneconomic levels.

One of the most striking instances of increases in labor costs under the NRA is afforded by the cotton textile industry. This reports an addition of 78 per cent to pay rolls, accompanied by an advance of only 3 per cent in the number of bales of cotton consumed by the industry. Obviously, that means that the cost of labor expended upon the manufacture of each yard of cotton cloth has been greatly increased.

Official statistics showing increases in hourly earnings of factory workers in general also testify to a rapid increase in unit production costs. Between July, 1933, the peak production point of the year, and March, 1934, manufacturing production, as measured by the index of the Federal Reserve Board, actually declined. Meantime, average hourly earnings in manufacturing establishments increased about 24 per cent, pay roll totals rose 27 per cent and the average number of hours worked declined about 15 per cent.

At first glance there might seem to be a certain inconsistency in the warning which Mr. Richberg now voices. From the outset a major objective of the NRA has been to increase the purchasing power of labor while shortening its working hours. It has greatly helped to bring those "sudden and sweeping increases in labor costs" against which its general counsel now warns the country.

On this point, however, Mr. Richberg can defend himself by showing that increases in labor costs are not necessarily uneconomic. Such charges, if met out of desirable economies or out of increased sales, may add to the National income which determines the upper level of returns to both capital and labor. What this NRA official is really saying is that the Government pushed the wage level up on the assumption that the action would later prove economically justifiable. If that assumption is falsified the return to the "road to ruin" will soon become apparent.

H. L. M. And The Language.

In 1910, when H. L. Mencken first began to write about the American language, the literature on the subject was meager. His great book on this subject was a pioneer. It will probably live long after all his other writings, excepting the essays on Conrad and Beethoven, are forgotten. Before Mencken began to attract attention to the way Americans spoke, and dignified their speech with a scholarly approach, the subject had been sneered at by our snobbishly Anglicized professors of English. Now we are not ashamed of the American language as such and sometimes in our pride step far beyond the bounds of etymological propriety.

The sage of Baltimore is reported as working on a revision of his tome. It already has twice been revised, once in 1921, and again in 1923. During the past decade he has been far too busy with mundane affairs to devote much public attention to the subject nearest his heart. But privately he has been collecting source material. He has saved some 5,000 newspaper clippings as well as hundreds of letters from all over the world.

Twenty books on the subject are said to be available now. Nearly 100 learned pamphlets or monographs, as the English would call them, have appeared. A magazine, started in 1925 and now published by Columbia University, is accessible to all interested in its subject: "American Speech." The strange pronunciation and unusual meanings of words, the sectional dialects of this sprawling country, the city patois, all make a fascinating subject for study. No one is better equipped for the task than the witty, analytical, thoroughly nonacademic Mr. Mencken, who, incidentally, has added much to the language by his own virile writings.

The World Bank Protests.

The United States has a valuable ally in its fight to secure as good treatment for American holders of Dawes and Young Plan bonds as that accorded other national groups. As trustees for these bonds the Bank for International Settlements has already had occasion to protest against plans to include them under a general transfer moratorium. The bank has also registered formal objections to the abrogation of the gold clause in the Young Plan bonds and in the American portion of the Dawes bond issue.

Now it is properly demanding that all holders of these bonds shall be treated alike. In thus protesting against the preferential treatment accorded the British under the recent Anglo-German agreement, the B. I. S. gives added emphasis to the recent strongly worded communication of our State Department, warning Germany against adoption of discriminatory debt policies.

Dr. Schacht's presence at Basel for the meeting of the directors of the B. I. S., and his reported willingness to discuss the debt issue, may mean much or little. It was his intention to suspend all transfers on the Dawes and Young Plan bonds, on the plea that Germany could not meet these payments. Now that the British have succeeded in extorting payments for themselves, his ability to influence the course of any subsequent negotiations seems questionable. As an astute financier, he certainly does not need to be told that the discriminatory policies that are being followed will prove very costly to Germany in the long run.

The United States is relatively helpless if Germany chooses to ignore our protests and that of the B. I. S. As a net exporter we are not in a position—if we cared to adopt such crude policy—to seize German commercial balances and apply them to debt payments. However, this country is a source of potential capital supply that Germany will want to draw upon again in the future. American confidence in Germany's financial honesty has been badly shaken by recent events. Investors will be further alienated if American holders of reparations bonds are discriminated against in defiance of the terms of the contract and in disregard of the most elementary principles of justice.

Protests do not mean that this country expects the impossible. To drive too hard a bargain would only lead to more broken promises. We are merely demanding equal rights. In so doing, we are taking a stand quite as much against the unfair and disruptive tactics of European creditors as against Germany's action in yielding to their demands for special concessions.

Some Scoring!

Perhaps even more for Englishmen than for other nationals, these are times that try men's souls. At least "abroad," cricket is declining.

Cricket is British. Cricket is almost Britain. "To play the game" means to play the game of life in the tradition of the cricket field. The worst thing that a British subject can do is anything that "isn't cricket." And it has been as great a colonizing force as the dinner jacket. The bat, the wicket and the boiled shirt have always followed the Union Jack.

But now—just while the Australian cricketers are meeting the champion team of the mother country—there appears a bulletin of our own National Geographic Society with the announcement that American baseball, circling the world, has invaded the British Dominions. Sir James M. Barrie, speaking to those Australian players, declares that cricket is a gift of the gods, "the only game they play themselves." But he hints sadly that it may move back from Eton to Olympus.

Chicket won't endure, outside of England. And the reason is clear from a glance at the scoreboard of this match with Australia. Monday's game wasn't a game, it was only an installment. The home-team having scored 627 runs, not out, the visitors ran up 423, also not out. Before they finish, the score is going to look like the war debts bill. And while games of that sort may be all right for the gods, who are notoriously idle fellows, it is to be remembered that the average fan

He Rather Likes Us.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading your paper regularly for a number of years and have enjoyed it more than any other paper. What I enjoy most are the beautiful, soft and well composed photographs by Goodwin, Mills and Miller in the daily paper the year around and the rotogravure section. The rotogravure section with its wonderful studies can not be beaten. For instance, the photograph by Miller of the storm in Potomac Park, Saturday, June 23, and again the following Sunday. Then, too, there always appears a series of articles and photos on history, &c., which makes very valuable material to save and file for ready reference.

I enjoy the news as it is written for everyone's viewpoint, up to the minute and full accounts. Many of the news items are very interesting because they are written with so much humor, that makes one really laugh, instead of trying to figure out what in the deuce it is all about. There are a few things I miss from your paper. First, the regular page devoted to Washington news and incidents that used to appear on the first page of the second section. What is the trouble? Isn't there enough news in this little town to form a daily page. One likes to know what is going on right around him. Then, again, the daily fire record which used to appear each day, which used to cure the curiosity of one when each day and night they hear the sirens and wonder what it is all about. ROBERT BURKE.

Tolls of Childbirth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The current number of the Pictorial Review has an article stating that 20,000 mothers die of childbirth each year in America, and many deaths could be prevented by better care. We have in this country the highest maternal death rate of any civilized country and it is a National disgrace. Women never have had a square deal, as it is still a man's world and it seems to me all women, single or married, who have the welfare of their sex at heart, should read that article and through their clubs and organizations demand better hospital care for all prospective mothers. So much is done by society for our soldiers, it is unfair that women who risk their lives in having children should not have equal attention, as they certainly are as deserving and courageous as men on the battlefield.

Mob Mania Victim.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am afraid that The Post was feeling the effects of the protracted heat spell when it published the article about Grover Cleveland Bergdoll in the magazine section, July 8.

The article omits all facts favorable to the man; it marshals all the facts that could be used against him; interprets everything unfavorably toward him; and welds the whole together with a great display of contempt.

It is not stated therein that Bergdoll's so-called flimsy draft exemption claim was not thought so flimsy in the case of thousands of other men; nor that he was only an evader of the draft and not an obstructionist. It is very unfair to say that the man groveled on the floor while his mother defended him from apprehension. There are no facts upon which to base such a statement. Associates of the boy knew him to be a dashing, colorful chap and not a spoiled playboy, as the writer seems to say.

Long before the boy had a chance to arrange his affairs and volunteer, as many of his fellows did later, the whole community from nit-wit to nabob began to make of him a symbol of all things unpatriotic and unholy. Under such unjust mob mania, the boy could expect neither fairness nor decency, let alone glory. Being high spirited and full of youth he rebelled. Knowing much of the ways of war, I can say that it requires more than a groveling spirit to defy a nation obsessed with war psychology. The boy may have been mistaken and he may have been wrong under the circumstances, but he was neither coward, knave nor fool.

Lest I be accused of all sorts of things by the readers, let me say that I bear wounds and wear medals and that my family gave freely to the hospital and grave. We lost eyes, arms and organs, but, thank God, we never lost our head.
GEORGE LESNER GRAVES.

Borahlic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are sure Mr. Borah must at last be profoundly happy, now that he is a regularly announced one-man party, armed with a double-barreled gun, one barrel aimed at the Administration and the other at Republican candidates. Nothing could be more typically Borahlic. To agree with any policy, it must, of course, be announced by himself. His present attitude's only lack of being strictly characteristic is his avowed determination to convert the country to his views and carry it with him, whereas he has always been signally indifferent as to a following, an essential to happiness possessed or craved by no other man in political life. Even in this special instance, the great man may prove true to form as to followers. We hope he doesn't go off the record. GEORGE E. GARY.
Rome, Ga., July 6.

Likes Our Weather.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The whines of parasites are not worth noticing as long as they stay in their class, but when they reach above it they should be annihilated at once. This process should begin with the one signing itself, "In the Frying Pan." We sincerely hope Washington weather will dump him from the frying pan into the hottest part of the fire. You could not kick this class out of Washington at any time, because they never knew what a decent living was until they came here. This type is a menace, not fit to be employed any place, and Washington does not want it. Railroad and steamship schedules are free for the asking, and in some cases the authorities furnish transportation; so we invite "The Frying Pan" to get out and stay out.

Undermining the TVA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a persistent rumor in this territory to the effect that the Tennessee Valley Authority is encountering considerable geological difficulties in the construction of Norris Dam and is concerned about the impounding of water above the dam, both due to the existence of subterranean caverns. It is my understanding that recently, after having completed the foundation for one of the wings of the dam, drill holes were put down before continuing the work and a large cavern was encountered; and that the Government has been busily engaged in filling this cavern. It is my further information that above the dam, where it is planned to impound the waters, large caverns, &c., have been discovered.

I am familiar with the fact that the United States Army engineers, while never condemning the building of Norris Dam, have never approved it because of the very difficulties which have been encountered. In other words, the position of the Army engineers has been that the location should be thoroughly prospected for these caverns and crevices before the dam is built.

It has just occurred to me that you could develop this matter further. If these rumors are true, it is just another evidence of the poor judgment exercised by the TVA in spending money first and then investigating when it is too late. MILTON H. FIES.

No Maryland Dictator.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to answer Maryland Democrat, as I think he must be among the host of job holders under the Ritchie administration, therefore his zealous solicitation in retaining the Governor for a fifth term.

Evidently the writer is not well versed on the bill of rights and State constitution, when he says that the part which states "a long continuance in the executive office is dangerous to liberty, and rotation in office is the surest and wisest guarantee of freedom," does not mean the governorship. Well, then, what does it mean?

The writer does not agree with Maryland Democrat. It would be dangerous to elect any candidate for a fifth term, especially the Governor, for Maryland is not ready for a dictatorship yet. I can see why Ritchie wants to hold on. Should he be defeated, the record, which would become public, would open the eyes of the most confirmed job holder. No, Ritchie will be defeated, and although I am a Democrat, I look to see Maryland go Republican in the fall election.

Kinda Hanging Around

Our enterprising contemporary, the Lufkin Daily News, noting that the President was to take his vacation aboard a cruiser named for Texas' largest city has been conducting a spirited single-handed campaign to induce the President to come to Texas and leave for Hawaii from Houston. Lacking support, its effort failed. The President couldn't come, the News laments editorially, continuing:

"President Roosevelt told us that Saturday. He didn't tell us personally but he wired us. That is, he didn't exactly wire us himself, but he had Mr. M. H. McIntyre, his assistant secretary, to do it. Or, at least, the first secretary had Mr. McIntyre to do it.

"Anyhow, Mr. McIntyre said Mr. Roosevelt was much obliged. . . . The plans, he said, were already too far along to be changed. The President regretted that he couldn't do it. He said so. At least, Mr. McIntyre said Mr. Roosevelt regretted it.

"We regret it too. We wish we had wired a few days earlier. We wish we had taken it up with Garner and Martin Dies and Connally and the Houston Chamber of Commerce. With them helping us, we could have got Franklin down here to be met at Houston by the cruiser he's to sail on. But Garner was fishing and Dies was busy and Connally was running against Bailey and the Houston Chamber of Commerce was probably staging a financial drive.

"Anyhow, the thing fell through. We did the best we could.

"Texas, seems like, doesn't get much. We just kinda hang around the United States, handy when somebody needs some votes or something. About the only way anybody notices us is when we bury a couple of outlaws or go Hoovercrat. When it comes to big time stuff, like visits from Presidents and so on, somebody else always gets the gravy. . . . Thunder, nobody even has quintuplets down here."

The Post Impressionist

Postoffice, Wednesday.

DOUBTLESS depression has deprived this poor world of many precious possessions which it could ill afford to lose. But certainly our adversities have also relieved us of a few trinkets the departure of which at least the Post-Impressionist can view without alarm.

Consider merely some that were at the top of the heap:

There was the speakeasy. It has vanished. We remain.

There were the inordinately high stakes on the bridge-table. They have been swept off it—without the chagrin entailed by some one winning them. And we survive.

There was the 25 per cent tip. The salaried servitor who today gets a 10 per cent gratuity is lucky. Yet even the hat-check girls manage to smile.

And, above all, there was pep . . .

* * *

Pep ruled the world—or misruled it.

Did you have pep? That was the test-question for every sort of human being in every phase of life. Pep was more than a means to an end, though the one means to every end. In fact, there wasn't any end to pep. It was in itself an end beyond all the ends it was supposed to attain. And, if you didn't have it, the social structure wouldn't have you.

* * *

"That's a lovely baby; full of pep" . . .

"There's a gal who can marry anybody she wants; she's got pep, she has" . . .

"You can have the job if you'll put some pep into the work" . . .

A goodly portion of mankind was saying those things.

* * *

The popular merchants, lawyers, even bankers were bankers, lawyers and merchants with pep. Admiring rumor announced that there was at least one Supreme Court Justice who was showing signs of pep . . .

"Come around to our church; we got a peppy preacher there."

* * *

Mere paprika languished in that highly seasoned market. History had never recorded such a demand for cayenne.

* * *

"Snap into it!"

The bricklayer tore up to the scene of his job in an automobile positively smoking from sheer speed; before its engine ceased to throb, he was wielding his trowel. The businessman had his letters read to him while he shaved, and dictated the answers on his way downtown. The stenographer broke one pencil in every two minutes. You didn't pick up a telephone; you grabbed it. Dentists were forever reporting cases of jaw-fracture caused by over-peppy gum-chewing.

* * *

And why?

You remember the story of the distinguished Chinese and how, showing him around New York, they said:

"Now we get out of the subway, which circles City Hall Square. We cut straight across the square on foot."

"And why?" inquired the Oriental.

"Because that saves us 30 seconds."

"Indeed? Then what do you do with the 30 seconds that you have saved?"

* * *

The worst of it all was that it was nearly all artificial. Most people didn't want to expend five ounces of energy in doing one ounce of work. They were worn out by it. They were nervous wrecks who—because everybody else did—had to keep on pretending that they weren't.

* * *

Then came the depression.

For the privately pep-prostrated, wasn't it a blessing in disguise? The disguise was thorough. We admit that. Yet look at the results!

* * *

It punctured the pep pretext. People remembered that pepper is, after all, only a condiment. Then they remembered that a condiment is useless so long as you have a healthy appetite—and that a condiment is worse than useless when you haven't enough to satisfy the appetite.

* * *

So now we can again admire babies that take plenty of sleep—marry girls that are restful—become confident clients to those bankers, lawyers and merchants who have time to talk to their clients. The bricklayer lays just as many bricks—when he can find them to lay. The businessman gets through just as much business as he can discover. And both of them, if they haven't lost their nerve, have recovered their nerves.

There is even some indication that they are recovering their manners. Today you can enter the average office and not have to wait more than a quarter of an hour before the office-boy asks you what you want there. When he takes you to the secretary of the boss, the odds aren't above 7 to 3 that she'll tell you the boss is in conference. And when you finally reach the boss, he won't sign letters for much more than half the time you're talking to him.

* * *

"Snap into it," indeed!

Nowadays you don't snap into anything. By the time you've found the entrance, you are going at a walk. If you like it, you linger. And, even if you don't like it, you don't snap out of it; you linger, anyhow. It may be true that the turnover of the chewing-gum industry for the first six months of the current year shows an increase over similar periods for four years preceding, but, if you will look at the chewers' jaws, you will note that they are working in an adagio, a dignified grace, to which the people of the Pep Period simply could not have restrained themselves.

* * *

No, no; we are the poorer through some losses, but we are richer through our loss of pep.

When Does He Coordinate?

IT BEGINS to look as though Mr. Donald Richberg, true to my suspicions, is to establish a world's record in coordination. Or rather, it is in gigantic coordination that he is to establish this record. Minor coordinators, of course, have gone into small troubled zones and coordinated in no time, but in such coordinating enterprises as Mr. Richberg has undertaken, the coordination of the multiple New Deal agencies, the time he has assigned is so short as to take the breath.

BARGERON

You know about a week ago it was heralded on all the front pages that Mr. Richberg, in recognition of his ability, had been lifted temporarily from the NRA and given a bigger and better job, his $12,000 a year salary following him right along. He was to be executive secretary of the old Frank Walker Emergency Council and director of a council that was superimposed upon this.

* * * *

As everyone gasped and wondered what in the name of goodness it was that Mr. Richberg was to be, he explained that he was to be a coordinator—he was to synchronize the various recovery endeavors, to bring them into an integrated, smoothly working whole and to coordinate them in the common aim of the more abundant life. Well, hardly anything could sound more important than that.

With all of the important recovery agencies we have hereabouts headed by so many important men and all of them so close to the President—with this set-up, and then for Mr. Richberg to be the coordinator of them, it would seem that he would have to be even more important and closer to the throne. Some of the more imaginative of the newspaper boys did it was Acting President that Mr. Richberg really was to be, which appeared to annoy Mr. Richberg no little bit.

* * * *

Well, it appears now that Mr. Richberg is to accomplish his great coordinating job in just one month's time.

I got to worrying about him yesterday. It occurred to me that he had been out of town making speeches ever since he got to be coordinator. His coordinating time is up, according to the original plans, on September 1. It seemed that he had short enough time as it was to do his coordinating in, but then to be off for a week making speeches made me nervous as to just when the coordination was to begin.

Inquiry disclosed that the week's absence was not a circumstance, that he would not be back in his office until August 1. His office seemed rather reluctant to discuss whether he was to spend that time vacationing or in making speeches. Manifestly, however, he was not to spend it coordinating.

Now, when he gets back here August 1, he will have just one month in which to do the coordinating job. What a coordinator the man must be!

The plain truth is that Mr. Richberg is not slated to coordinate anything. The very capable Frank Walker, when he was head of the emergency council, didn't coordinate anything. He set up any number of additional bureaus and commissions out in the States and coordinating councils over them. But nothing was ever coordinated.

Something is happening at the NRA. It is going through a transition and will likely end up in a month or so in entirely different form. The general is going away on a vacation. Apparently, the idea was to get Richberg away for awhile, too.

Why, though, it could not have been announced that his was to be a vacation, also, is difficult to understand. Why did the Administration simply announce that Johnson was to take a rest, while about Richberg's absence there had to be a lot of bunk about his coordinating?

How, in fact, can either man enjoy his vacation with his future so much in doubt which certainly seems to be implied in such carryings-on? I'd be as nervous as a setting men.

Protection on Bay Promised by Smith

Candidate for Governor Ends Shore Campaign.

Crisfield, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Speaking before a large gathering of watermen here, H. Webster Smith, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, promised his hearers yesterday that if he is elected Governor he would permit no boats of the State Conservation Commission to be mounted with machine guns with which to prowl "the peaceful waters of the Chesapeake Bay."

Mr. Smith made the statement after recalling that in the past boats of the State Conservation Commission have in several instances encountered and sometimes shot at Chesapeake Bay watermen while they were in the act of seeking a livelihood in nonlegal waters of the bay.

Mr. Smith's visit to Crisfield concluded his three-day campaign on the Eastern Shore. During his visit to the Shore he conferred with Republican leaders in Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset Counties, who assured him he would have liberal support from the shoremen in the primaries.

70 Years Ago City Quailed, Foe at Door

Green Troops Terrified as Early Swept on Washington, but Confederate Leader Wavered; Capital Was Saved and South Lost the War.

By Anton Angelo.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

FEW citizens now serenely walking the streets of Washington in safety and security realize that exactly 70 years ago—in mid-July of 1864—the National Capital was in grave danger of armed invasion; nay, actually invaded by Confederate forces.

Only the procrastination of Gen. Jubal A. Early, whom Gen. Robert E. Lee had dispatched to capture Washington in a last desperate effort to turn the tide, actually saved the Capital and the Union.

Surviving Confederate veterans reminisce wistfully as to what would have happened if——

And on that "if" hangs a tale that has been told all too inadequately.

The ides of July, 1864, were indeed fatal to the cause of the Confederacy. For it was then that Early's fateful retreat occurred; and from then on the star of the Confederacy waned until it was extinguished at Appomattox nine months later.

The first news that Early's troops were approaching Washington wrought consternation among the citizens, for while the fortifications of the Capital were in excellent condition, there was, owing to the speed and boldness with which Lee had formed his plans, only a small garrison of green recruits on hand.

Lee had conceived the idea of taking Washington with one of those flashes of mind so typical of that brilliant strategist. He figured that most of the European countries, eager to obtain Southern cotton for their idle mills, would no longer hesitate to recognize the Confederacy once the Southern soldiers had taken the Union Capital. He also perhaps realized that every country of Europe, with the exception of Switzerland, was a monarchy and that their sympathies were overwhelmingly with the Confederacy.

Early's Route to City Declared a Mistake.

MILITARY strategists contend that one of Early's major mistakes lay in the route he chose to reach Washington with his army, which consisted of some 18,000 men, including infantry, cavalry and artillery.

Early was in command of the corps formerly under the leadership of the redoubtable Stonewall Jackson. His men in gray were seasoned veterans, the flower of the Confederate army, and they were all "just rarin' to get at the damn Yanks."

The blame for the Confederate's failure to capture Washington is laid at Early's door, not only because of his overcautiousness, but also because—strategists claim—he took the wrong route by marching through Maryland instead of marching directly from Winchester, Va., after he had chased the Union general, Hunter, into the mountains.

Instead of following the more direct route, Early, after taking Harpers Ferry, invaded Maryland at Shepherdstown, where he crossed the Potomac and rapidly proceeded to Frederick.

At Frederick, Early routed Gen Lew Wallace, who later was to become world-famous as the author of "Ben Hur." Wallace, after a stout resistance, retreated to Baltimore.

12,000 Green Soldiers Defending Washington.

IN Washington, there were barely 12,000 men available. The fortifications consisted of Fort Stevens, Fort Lincoln, Fort Reno, Fort Slocum and Fort De Russy. These forts commanded most of the highways leading into Washington and, when adequately garrisoned, rendered the Capital virtually impregnable.

But the garrison, depleted by constant levies for armies at the front, was far too small. And the citizens who gathered anxiously on Pennsylvania avenue while the gray menace was drawing nearer were well aware of this. There were few cool heads among the soldiers, too. And many a citizen offered up prayers to the Almighty, beseeching Him to "save the city from the rebels." As in all wars, the wildest stories had been set afloat among the populace about the "horrible barbarism of the rebels."

Meantime, Early was moving steadily nearer to Washington. Encamping at Rockville on the night of July 10, after a day's forced march, he began the last leg of his march on the morning of July 11. Yet no adequate defense measures were taken in Washington.

Though it was apparent to military observers that Early intended to swoop down on Washington with the force of an avalanche, the Union authorities, for some mysterious reason, did not bestir themselves other than to form a reserve camp near Fort Stevens, where volunteer troops were hastily concentrated in command of Gen. McCook, an officer whose tactics showed that he had little knowledge of the topography of the region surrounding the Capital.

Gen. Meigs was placed in command of the defenses on the Seventh street pike. When he took charge, he found the defenses and the men manning them in a rather shaky condition. Indeed, the situation was such as to strike fear into the hearts of the bravest.

Early Fails to Strike; His Big Chance is Lost.

CONFEDERATE historians claim that all chances of success were in Early's favor and that he failed to take advantage of the psychological moment and capture the Capital by a storm attack when the morale of the defenders was at its weakest.

Be it as it may, Early wavered. A charitable viewpoint would be that he was perhaps overcautious for the safety of his men, despite Lee's orders to take Washington at all costs.

When he reached Silver Spring Early surveyed the defenses of Washington. It was apparent to him that Fort Stevens was very poorly defended, with hardly a skeleton garrison left. He ordered his generals to take the fort by a surprise attack, but the sudden arrival of a few thousand Union troops on the Seventh street pike set his heart to sinking.

Early visioned these troops as the forerunners of brigades, divisions, of a whole army corps. He countermanded his orders for an attack on Fort Stevens. And with that went glimmering Early's chance to emblazon his name in history and lay a real foundation for the Confederate States of America.

So, while the Confederate cavalry teased the Union defenders, Gen. Wright's division reached Washington from Baltimore, dispatched by Grant to save the Capital. Meantime a Confederate detachment opened fire on Fort Stevens and almost caused a rout within the fort. The undisciplined defenders were terrified. It is the utter incompetence of the first-line defenders of Fort Stevens that makes Early's blunder so amazing.

About this time some 700 dismounted Union cavalrymen from the Army of the Potomac reached Fort Stevens. They were disciplined veteran soldiers and they soon repulsed the Confederate vanguard.

The Union defenders established outposts near Fort Stevens and repeatedly drove back the attackers. The engagements continued on July 12. President Lincoln and his Cabinet were drawn to the scene of the battle and the defenders were heartened by the presence of their commander-in-chief. The President himself was in danger, for he was under fire for a time and several men standing near him were mowed down.

Union Soldiers Take Heart With Lincoln Near.

WHETHER it was the presence of the President or the arrival of Wright's reinforcements, the defenders of Washington stood their ground much better on July 12 than on the previous day. With ever-increasing ferocity the Confederates made foray after foray on Fort Stevens only to be driven back.

Hidden in buildings on the present site of Walter Reed Hospital and in nearby gulleys and embankments, Confederate sharpshooters slew scores of Union soldiers.

The battle around Fort Stevens finally narrowed down to a series of intermittent skirmishes. The deafening volleys of gunfire reverberating through the District of Columbia set the flesh of timid citizens to creeping. Not an eye was closed in the District during those two momentous nights when the fate of the Federal Union hung in the balance and the rebel yells echoed throughout the District.

Gen. McCook finally decided he had enough men on hand, with the reinforcements sent by Grant, to rout the Confederates. While the guns of Fort Stevens bombarded the buildings and other vantage points occupied by Early's men, McCook's soldiers attacked the Southern troops, and the now famous Battle of Fort Stevens was opened. The Confederates fought with their usual verve, but detachments attacking Fort Stevens received no adequate support from Early, who had already given up the plan of taking Washington. Reluctantly the Confederate attackers were forced to withdraw.

Retreat Orders Early; The Confederacy Totters.

EARLY now gave the fateful command to retreat. Excited couriers had brought him the misleading tidings that the whole Army of the Potomac was marching to the relief of Washington. He was in no position to check up on the veracity of their reports. So, under the circumstances, he had no other recourse but to retreat.

The battle of Washington was over. The Capital was saved, and the Confederate star was in its descent. European nations, once seemingly eager to welcome the Confederate States into the family of nations, lost interest in a loser.

Whether there are any survivors of Early's corps left who took part in the attack on Washington I do not know. I once knew two old Dixie veterans, Virginians, now dead, who sadly admitted that "the divil tole Early to quit." But there are still descendants of Early's men, who were children when Early ventured to attack Washington. Most of them shake their heads ruefully.

"If," they say, sadly, "if——"

More Deer Seen Near Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—A request by sportsmen that an open season for deer be declared may be made as a result of the appearance this summer of large numbers of deer in several sections of Washington County.

Orchardists around Hancock report seeing small herds grazing there. Many of these are believed to have either wandered in from Pennsylvania or were some of the deer freed by the Woodmont Rod & Gun Club from its preserve. The deer have increased so rapidly at Woodmont that it became necessary to free many of them.

Many deer have also been seen in recent years in the mountains back of Smithsburg. Most of these migrated from Pennsylvania.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Three Thematic Ladies.

OUR three lady novelists today have themes which are about as implicit and unobtrusive as a cinder in the eye. "Should children support their aged parents after the latter can't earn any more," asks Miss Josephine Lawrence in "Years Are So Long" (Stokes, $2.50). Miss Loveday Prior, in "A Law Unto Themselves" (Little Brown, $2.50) plays runs without variations upon the historic Hapsburg motto: "marry and rule"—telling us how the knights and barons (and especially a certain lady) of thirteenth century Austria made big principalities out of little ones. Mrs. Alice Tisdale Hobart, reissuing a 5 year old novel under a new title, orchestrates "River Supreme" (Bobbs Merrill $2.50) upon the twin leit motifs of the great rolling yellow river of China, the Yangtse, and the great rolling Yellow River of the Chinese people.

THEO. HALL.

There is, as I said, no missing these themes. At the most, five or six pages at a stretch may begin to insinuate us into the illusion of the scene. We begin to accept the story as a picture, as life. But then, with varying degrees of shock, we are halted in our tracks to be reminded once again that the novel has this sure-as-death-and-taxes, self-conscious, and pesky theme.

* * * *

It is hardly worth any one's breath to complain of the strenuously thematic novel—the species is here, no doubt, to stay for a while. True, there have been good examples, possibly great ones. Yet have you noticed how sadly thin such novels are worn by time?

For although they are the easiest to read, and I suspect very strongly the easiest to write, they are also far and away the easiest to forget. To forget, let me say, in relation to the right true end of the novel. We remember them as tickets—we do not remember them as living character, as revelatory action. Any one can tell you the theme of "Main Street." Who can furnish you with a round picture of three of the actors or describe for you three scenes?

Yet if you demur at this, and find the answers (or the hints of answers) at the tip of your tongue, consider that I've posed as an example quite the most famous of our recent thematic novels. What of "The Octopus" or "Moon-Calf" or "Black Oxen?"

At best the theme is a skeleton, covered over and implied by the flesh. At the worst, assertive and constantly harped-upon, the theme proves as conspicuous and uneasy-making as a crutch. One could not gainsay the earnestness or the aliveness or the entertaining quality, in their degrees, of these three thematic novels. But this common denominator stands as a not indefinite warning to the rest of the novel-writing legion.

Barkley Cooper was 73, a bookkeeper. He and his wife had reared five children, had passed their golden wedding.

One day, before the gathered clan, he said: "Your mother and I have no money. My job's gone for good. . . . From now on it's up to you children."

Miss Lawrence writes that on page 2 of "Years Are So Long." From there on we watch the bewildered helplessness of the parents, the not unkind and yet the something less than ungrudging support granted by the children. Grown up, with their own children and scant money, these last have troubles enough. The parents are separated and "farmed" about. In the end there is suicide and the poorhouse for them.

If the book starts flatly, the very momentum of its sincerity works us up to an ache of heart-burning. But the process is more tedious than it need have been. A novelized tract, the book argues more often than it portrays. Yet there can be no doubt that Miss Lawrence, a newspaper-woman in Newark, knows the ordinary American family and its relentless problems.

* * * *

Luise of Feilmar, far more lovely and only a shade less politically adept than Feuchtwanger's "Ugly Duchess," was born in 1232 in one of those fairy-tale castles of upper Autsria. Before she died, she had gathered many another into her ruthless, capable hands by dint of marriage, machination and conquest.

Miss Prior, 27-year-old English school teacher, fits a deal of medieval scenery onto that framework. Robber barons and margraves, troubadours and renegade friars, boy pages and ladies-in-waiting, all these pass across her panorama. In the 70 years of the tale there is more marrying and begetting than in the Book of Chronicles, more acquisition of land than in the annals of the Union Pacific Railroad. Yet for all this plethora of natural expansion, the characters remain stiff and dullish figures behind their period costumes. "A Law Unto Themselves" resembles a diet of graham bread—monotonous, but palatable if you have a taste for it.

* * * *

Livest, most interesting of the three, is Mrs. Hobart's "River Supreme." Published four years before "Oil for the Lamps of China" under the title "Pidgin Cargo," it stands as the first volume of her four-novel study of the impact of West upon East.

Capt. Eben Hawley, pushing his audacious little steamers up the roaring gorges of the upper Yangtse is a memorable figure. Vigorous and uncompromising, he trusts in trade and machinery, scorns the patient ways of the Chinese. If China wins out in the end, he and his pathetic wife, along with his son and the admirable "number one boy," Fu, have yet made a good fight of it.

Mrs. Hobart makes the Americans and Europeans in China thoroughly credible. She writes with accurate and pleasing color, with perhaps less pleasing phrase.

But as to the twin themes of yellow river and yellow race, one statement would have sufficed even the dullest reader. It is the dithyrambic reiteration of this which takes our mind and our belief from the richness of the rest.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Digest Poll.

* * * *

Only one State voted against him. That was Vermont, where they think Calvin Coolidge is doing the best he can under the circumstances.

* * * *

The Literary Digest, with whom life is just one poll after another, took a vote in all the States still living. Its purpose was to determine if there was any grave danger of the Republicans coming back. It found the bulk of the people remembered everything.

* * * *

Three out of every five people voted for Mr. Roosevelt, whether it hurt them much or not. The other two still sighed for the old day of two-chickened garages and an electric icebox in every auto.

* * * *

Both sides are surprised by the result. The Democrats are always surprised when they win anything. The Republicans are surprised because they weren't sure they could raise a quorum.

* * * *

A total of 1,772,163 people cast votes in the poll. The Digest thinks that a reasonable percentage of them knew what they were doing, although it is true of any such poll that thousands vote in the belief they are indorsing a new soap, taking a chance on an automobile or voting for a Mardi Gras queen.

* * * *

1,083,752 voted for Roosevelt and his policies. According to the Republicans this is still a million fewer people than are now on Government pay and who naturally wouldn't bite the hand that fed them.

* * * *

* * * *

The figures show that the President has increased his strength over his election returns, proving that he gave more jobs than he promised.

* * * *

A special poll of professions showed that the bankers alone would like the President to lose his Blue Eagle. That was unavoidable, as practically no Democrat has ever been successful enough to get into the banking business.

* * * *

The physicians and lawyers went to Roosevelt by a landslide. They ought to. Trying to interpret the New Deal is furnishing work for lawyers of all grades, and the doctors of America are up to their necks in work looking after sick Republicans.

In Confidence.

The King and Queen of Siam are visiting President von Hindenburg these days, and the old Iron Man must have whispered to the king by this time, "You think you have white elephants on your hands! Ach, look at me!"

President von Hindenburg is 87 years of age and no man is in a better position than he is to realize that the first 100 years are the hardest.

EUGENE ROBERT BLACK, Governor, Federal Reserve Board. Kept press in ferment over sporadic attempts at resignation over Presidential protests. Tall, cool-headed, lean, humorous, he has eschewed monetary monkey-shines. Had one eye on post vacated by Woodin. Hasn't been same since Morgenthau hoisted his burgee. Observed banks closed in mid-afternoon and thought he'd be banker. Elected governor, Atlanta Reserve Bank, 1928. Cautious, he warns we've been sitting in "an atmosphere of a Corona-Corona." Large nose, big ears, slight chin, looks like Andy Gump. Admits it. Leaves post (subject to change of mind) August 1.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Browning's Farewell.

Browning always hoped that he would be able to continue working up to the end of his life. This wish was abundantly fulfilled. On the very day he died, December 12, 1889, his last volume of poems was published in London. The dying poet was fully conscious, and a member of the family said to him, "Your book 'Asolando' is published today in London, and the evening papers contain enthusiastic reviews of it." Browning said, "That is very gratifying," which were his last words. He had had an advance copy of the volume sent to him a few days before he died, and he read its pages while he lay in bed. His daughter-in-law, Fannie Browning, showed me this very copy, which she afterward gave to the library of Wellesley College.

This last volume has on its last pages the poem called simply "Epilogue."

At the midnight in the silence of the sleep-time,
When you set your fancies free,
Will they pass to where—by death fools think, imprisoned—
Low he lies who once so loved you, whom you loved so, —Pity me?

Oh, to love so, be so loved, yet so mistaken!
What had I on earth to do
With the slothful, with the mawkish, the unmanly?
Like the aimless, helpless, hopeless, did I drivel —Being—who?

One who never turned his back but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break,
Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph;
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.

No, at noonday in the bustle of man's work-time,
Greet the unseen with a cheer!
Bid him forward, breast and back as either should be,
"Strive and thrive!" cry "Speed—fight on, fare ever
There as here!"

In the autumn Browning had been reading the manuscript of his last volume to his sister; when he read the third stanza of this poem, he said, "That sounds like boasting, but it is the simple truth."

The world received it as an accurate description of his own attitude toward life and death; and it is and ever will be a trumpet call to advance joyfully and bravely through the difficulties.

The second line in the last stanza I call the most optimistic line in literature. Browning had said: "When they read in the paper that Robert Browning is dead, I don't want them to be sorry for me. I want them to say that now he must be having a splendid time. When they think of me, I want them not to look sad, but to give me a cheer."

Druggists End Liquor Sales

Virginia Pharmacists Say They Cannot Compete With ABC Stores.

Richmond, July 10 (Spl.).—The new rules of the alcoholic beverage control board for drug stores selling liquors has killed this branch of the drug business, it was learned today.

Downtown and neghborhood druggists today were clearing their stocks of liquor preparatory to leaving all retailing to the A. B. C. stores.

"We can not compete with the A. B. C. stores," one druggist said. "The strict rules and regulations make this impossible."

In a number of the stores which did a heavy business in liquors while the A. B. C. stores were being established, present stocks of medicinal liquors will last for a considerable time and will be available on prescription. But after this is gone it will be impossible for persons with prescriptions to order deliveries from their druggists.

Some of the stores stocked champagne and brandy during the hiatus between repeal and A. B. C. store operation.

The A. B. C. rules applicable to druggists were designed to make it impossible for drug stores to sell liquor except for bona fide medicinal use. The rules governing prescriptions are considereed even more strict than those of preprohibition days.

Highway Rerouting Program Opposed

Fredericksburg Council Is Against Proposal.

Fredericksburgfi Va., July 10 (Spl.).—No rerouting of State highways through Fredericksburg will be requested by the city council, it was decided at a meeting last night.

The State highway commission has considered rerouting some roads to eliminate through traffic congestion and noise from Fredericksburg streets, and had asked for an expression of opinion from the council.

Rebuilding of the free bridge across the Rappahannock River was favored by the council in a resolution adopted for presentation to the highway commission. The decision opposing rerouting of the present road system was unanimous.

Grand Jury Called In Assault Charge

2 D. C. Men Accused of Attack on Pair.

A special grand jury session for next Monday was called yesterday in La Plata, Md., by Judge W. Mitchell Digges to consider charges against two Washington men accused of attempting criminal assault. The prisoners, who are being held without bail in La Plata, are Oliver L. Decatur and Raymond E. Zell.

Judge Digges said a special term of court will be held to try the pair if the grand jury returns indictments. John F. Mudd, attorney for Zell, asked the special court term.

Miss Jean Curran, a nurse, and Herbert B. Newman are the complainants. Both are Washingtonians. At a preliminary hearing yesterday before Magistrate H. R. Lee Reich, they told of accepting a ride from the two men, who picked them up as they waited for a bus at North Beach.

Nearing La Plata, the machine suddenly turned into a dark side road and the men attacked Newman and attempted to attack Miss Curran, the complainants charge.

Virginia Peanuts Show Fine Yield

25 Per Cent Increase in Acreage Reported.

A peanutu acreage increase of 25 per cent in Virginia was reported yesterday by the Agriculture Department, the Associated Press said.

Throughout the land, the department said, the number of acres planted in peanuts was 12 per cent greater this year than last. The largest increase, 50 per cent, was in Oklahoma.

In Virginia the peanut crop conditions were best. There they were 85 per cent of normal, compared with the ten-year average of 78.3 per cent. The average crop condition for the peanut-growing area was 72. Last year the average was 68 per cent.

Shenandoah Park Glider Base Ready When Road Is Opened

The base will be ready for use as soon as the Skyline Drive is opened, officials said today. The runway has been prepared to enable gliders to take off when there is no wind. The lack of the wind last fall prevented young DuPont from taking off on various days.

The runway is along the drop from Big Meadows CCC camp and provides for a rising of 3,000 feet, where a towing car could only attain a speed of 40 miles an hour.

No definite information has been received as to the meeting of the American Soaring Society, scheduled to take place here this fall, other than it would be held as soon as the Skyline Drive is completed. It now seems that the Skyline Drive will not be opened until late in the year.

The weekly pay roll last week amounted to $1,552.90.

Three hundred and thirty-seven men have received work through the local relief office, six of whom have recently been added to complete improvements on the Jefferson County Courthouse here, famous because John Brown was tried and sentenced within its walls. This project was formerly a CWA job and was taken over by the FERA.

Lincoln Killing Photos Figure In $50,000 Suit

Baltimore, July 10 (Spl.).—Eight pictures of scenes made historic by the assassination of President Lincoln and the flight of his slayer, John Wilkes Booth, in 1865, are involved in a $50,000 lawsuit filed here today by Mrs. Nettie Mudd Monroe, a descendant of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, of southern Maryland.

Mrs. Monroe charges the pictures, once in her possession, were obtained from her by Michael Schloss, Baltimore clothing manufacturer, who died about a year ago. She says Schloss converted them to his own uses, and she is suing the executors of his estate for the $50,000 damages.

The pictures, according to her petition, show the home of Dr. Mudd, where Booth sought refuge after the assassination of Lincoln; the room where Dr. Mudd set a broken bone in Booth's leg, received when he fell in jumping from the Presidential box in Ford's Theater in Washington after the slaying, and the jury which tried the Lincoln conspirators.

Dr. Mudd was tried and convicted of aiding in Booth's escape, and was sentenced to the Dry Tortugas for life. Later he was pardoned. He always maintained he did not know Booth had killed the President.

Fairmont Delegate Urges Repeal of Taxes

Fairmont, W. Va., July 10 (Spl.). Fred L. Doringer, of this city, member of the State House of Delegates, has launched a movement to bring about repeal of the State gross sales tax and the individual income tax at the next session of the legislature.

Both these taxes will not be needed, Doringer believes, if proper corrections are made in the new 2 per cent consumers' sales tax, which he advocates. He contends that much of the money now being collected from consumers is not reaching the State coffers.

Maryland Requests Return of Slayer

Baltimore, July 10 (Spl.).—Maryland's request for the return of Jack Hart to the State penitentiary in Baltimore, so he can complete his life sentence for murder, was before Gov. Henry Horner, of Illinois, today.

Hart, most famous of Maryland outlaws, was convicted as leader of the Norris gang, which killed a man on the streets of Baltimore in August, 1923. Two escapes from the penitentiary by Hart, and his subsequent recaptures, gave him widespread notoriety.

After his last escape in 1929, he remained at large until his arrest last year in Cicero, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. He was sentenced to a term of one to 14 years in Illinois for wounding a man in a fight, and he will become eligible for a parole soon. State's Attorney O'Connor, of Baltimore, asked Gov. Horner for custody of the convict, in the event a parole is granted.

Mary Brian, on Brief Vaudeville Tour, Proves Herself a Star of Poise and Charm

Sense of Humor Adds to Lively Appeal of Girl

By Nelson B. Bell.

After having visited with her at some length and more or less informally and intimately, one feels no inclination to describe Mary Brian, currently making a week of personal appearances at Loew's Fox, in association with Gordon and King, as "exotic," "demure" or "ingenuous."

MARY BRIAN

Miss Brian is none of these things. She is, however, a charming young woman—just as you must have suspected ever since her first screen appearance as Wendy in "Peter Pan," the silent version of the Sir James M. Barrie play in which the title role was played by Betty Bronson and Esther Ralston also was prominently cast—whom one immediately recognizes as a youthful actress of poise, savoir faire and no little distinction.

And not the least of Miss Brian's assets is a gorgeous sense of humor. In the "Little Caesarian" verbiage of Edward G. Robinson, she can both "dish it out" and "take it."

Try and Find Out!

Particularly amusing did Miss Brian find a long United Press news dispatch dated July 7, which we showed her because it was in the nature of a personal note to her, "somewhere east of Memphis," from Leicester Wagner, staff correspondent, who assured her that she need not worry about Dick Powell's squiring Mary Carlisle about, because Mary Brian's was the only photograph on Dick's dressing room table.

The dispatch went on to say that Dick is at heart a family man and hopes in time to be married and then laid odds of something like 10 to 1 that Mary would be the girl—Brian, not Carlisle.

To all of this Miss Brian lent an amused ear—and replied nothing. Nor could she be made to commit herself. So there you are.

But Mary did have much to say about the cordiality of Washington audiences, about the trials, tribulations and pleasant surprises of the brief tour of personal appearances, to which Washington was added, after she had presumed herself to be fairly on the way back to Hollywood. That happens directly after the final curtain falls on the stage show at the Fox Thursday night.

I mean the return to Hollywood. And one gathers that Mary will be glad to get back to the film capital, although she is enjoying the experience of being the feminine third of a clever dancing act. It was originally a foursome of dancers, with the complete team of Gordon, Reed & King sharing honors with Reed and King sharing honors with Miss Brian. But Mr. Reed had to make a picture at just this time and so is deleted from the act temporarily. Then, too, there are hints that as a foursome the turn never quite got going, due to no fault of Miss Brian's

Same as on Screen.

Mary is about as you would expect her to be. Possibly not so tall as she sometimes seems on the screen, but with the same coloring, the same literate frankness, the same poise and the same engaging charm that have characterized all of her impersonations on the silver sheet.

The present "tour" of vaudeville appearances has consisted of only three weeks, with this the last, but it has been something of a revelation to Miss Brian of the esteem in which she is held by theatergoers and the hardships that are to be expected if one is to be a "hoofer."

She confesses frankly enough that the first couple of days "we were on tour, my legs were numb;" also that she ran into solid brick walls in search of the proper exit after her numbers and otherwise encountered physical and mental hazards that might have done in a less courageous, humorous and tolerant youngster.

Mary Brian, you may rest assured, is a young woman of whom you can safely believe the most flattering things you ever hear said, or see written, henceforth and forever—pretty, sparkling and mentally alert. Precisely the kind of girl you have always been sure, sooner or later, would come along from Hollywood.

Our visit with Miss Brian was at the welcome-home party given our afternoon confrere, Mr. Eddie De Star Melcher, just back from Hollywood Sabbath afternoon, by City Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Sunday evening in the Carlton. To the great sorrow of all his guests, Mr. Barron was unable to be present at the Melcher welcome, having been called suddenly to his home in Clarksville, Ga., by the death of a sister. The sympathy of a host of friends goes out to Mr. Barron in his bereavement.

Mr. Lust Goes National.

In addition to his duties on the local grievance board of the motion picture code authority, Sidney Lust, one of the foremost of the Capital's independent exhibitors and film exchange managers, has been drafted for service on the National General Appeal Board of the code authority, necessitating his presence in New York on an average of every ten days.

Mr. Lust also is on the advisory committee conferring with West Coast producers quarterly—this on behalf of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America—and so is willing to rent at a modest figure the peg in Washington on which he heretofore has habitually hung his hat!

After many false starts, especially when Vilma and Buddy Ebsen made a recent professional appearance in the Capital, Ruth Cambridge, private secretary to that key-hole columnist, is in Washington. Miss Cambridge, who in private life is Mrs. Buddy Ebsen, arrived at the Shoreham yesterday morning with her husband after an all-night drive from New York. They spent the day sleeping, but last night were accorded honors on the Shoreham terrace, which this column was prevented from attending by the violence with which automobiles strike members of its family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ebsen are en route to Orlando, Fla., home of the Ebsens, where Vilma already has preceded them. They will return to New York through Washington in about three weeks.

We are indebted to the thoughtfulness of Ruth Barnard for these little items that grow into big paragraphs like this. And I hope Ruth and Buddy enjoyed their nap. I could use one myself!

"Postman Always Rings Twice."

Needless to say, it is a pleasure to receive notes likes the following, which is wholly self-explanatory:

Dear Mr. Bell: I have enjoyed reading what you have said concerning the tearing down of Poli's, the President and the Cosmos Theaters. It is a sore loss to those who have seen so many fine shows in these theaters and have spent so many enjoyable hours there. But there is an even more pathetic example of a place where people have been merry and happy and which now is silent and deserted. I refer to the old Charles Macalester steamer anchored beside the old Newport News-Norfolk boat just south of Alexandria. There she stands lonely, deserted and forgotten; a has-been; no good to anyone any more. Many persons probably pass on the newer boats and never give a thought to the "old tub," but here is one who remembers many happy hours spent going to and from Marshall Hall.

I also would like to tell you how much I enjoyed a column you used to have in The Sunday Post, in which you told of the attractions that were playing in the legitimate houses 25 years ago. I think this column was very instructive and enjoyable and wish it could have been continued.

Another old landmark which no one remembers is Luna Park, over at Four Mile Run. You should go over and see the site where once people were happy and enjoyed themselves. All that remains of that large park is the basin which the chute-the-chute boats landed in after sliding down the incline. All other indications of an amusement park have disappeared.

Here's more power to you in remembering things that have gone but are surely not forgotten. Sincerely, Guy Robertson.

We admit an inexcusable indifference to the fate of that good old tub the Charles Macalester, on which we, too, have whiled away many beguiling hours, but from time to time we have revived fading memories of Luna Park, down at Four Mile Run, Va. The last time, I believe, was in a recent Sunday "lead" in which comparison was drawn between the present-day amusement field in the National Capital and that of 25 years ago.

As to that "The Theater 25 Years Ago Today" feature that we ran for many months a few years ago, there is no apparent reason why it might not be revived, with pleasure and profit to all concerned. Thank you, Mr. Robertson, for the suggestion.

Meteorological Note.

Those showers that didn't fall certainly made it a great deal cooler, if any, or is everybody crazy but me?

A. B. C. Studying Sites For Winchester Store

Winchester, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was reported today as considering six business locations here as probable sites for a liquor dispensary to be opened soon.

One site is the American Legion Building and another is the Faulkner Building, both in the downtown business section. Several weeks ago, a petition was circulated here requesting the ABC board to select the Legion Building for a dispensary.

Two Men Fined $100 For Drunken Driving

Charles Town, W. Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Two men were tried before Mayor Frank Cockrill yesterday for driving automobiles while under the influence of liquor.

Grover Lee, of Millville, Va., was fined $100 and costs, and being unable to pay was sentenced to 60 days in jail. Joe Brooks, a resident of Virginia, received a similar fine.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 9.—So much has been said pro and con about "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" that the final definite word on it—or what looks like that—will be meaningful. The picture is to start in about two weeks, and Gary Cooper, who is at present visiting the Century of Progress Exhibition at Chicago as well as the family of Sandra Shaw, his wife, will return by then to take part in it.

CHARLES RAY.

The cast further includes Cary Grant, Dick Arlen and Sir Guy Standing, while Frances Drake has been assigned to the feminine lead. Miss Drake has been making progress and has achieved a particularly fine impression at the preview of "Ladies Should Listen," a farcical type of entertainment, in which she was the feminine lead opposite Grant and appearing with Nydia Westman, Rosita Moreno, Edward Everett Horton and Charles Ray. Incidentally, the audience gave Ray a tremendously big hand at that preview. Miss Drake looks certain of steadily increasing fame as a leading woman.

"Lives of a Bengal Lancer" was originally started about two years ago, and has been on and off the fire ever since. It's the most warmed-over opus in the movies right now.

Stars Of the Ether.

Whenever "Radio City Revels" is produced, it will probably feature a host of celebrities from the ether. There's no telling as yet who they will be; it depends on who is available when the picture is made, which will probably be sometime in August. The principal roles are to be played by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. There is some talk of Walter Winchell appearing in it. And certain also it is that various star names of the R.-K.-O. studio will glitter in the picture, including Irene Dunne, Dorothy Lee and Wheeler and Woolsey.

This picture will be produced by Bernie Fineman as his first under contract as associate producer of the studio.

• • • •

Claire Dodd With O'Brien.

It is Claire Dodd who will appear with Ann Dvorak in "I Sell Anything," starring picture for Pat O'Brien. Bette Davis was rumored for this role, but she is going into something else. Bette's trouble with Warner Brothers has been straightened out. Miss Dodd has played semiheavies in pictures, but will have a straight role in this. The story has to do with auctioneering and consequently will loom as a rival for Will Rogers, who is slated to do a picture about this particular kind of business. Roscoe Karns, one of the most reliable of the assisting comedians, also gets a part in this film.

• • • •

A Natural For Lederer.

Whenever Francis Lederer comes back to R.-K. O. the picture that he is to play in will be "Romance of Manhattan," with Steve Roberts directing. In this Lederer will impersonate a Czechoslovakian immigrant, and consequently may offer an impersonation not unlike his first picture, "The Man of Two Worlds." Also, he will be playing one of the people of the land in which he was born. At present Lederer is in "Pursuit of Happiness" at Paramount, and despite all reports of the censorship trouble this picture might encounter, it has started shooting.

Henry Stephenson is the first member of the cast with Miriam Hopkins in "The Richest Girl in the World" to have been selected. Reports indicated for a while that Joel McCrea would appear in the film, but that is uncertain now as McCrea is intending to free-lance when his contract draws to a close, in the near future. So far, no leading man has been chosen for the picture, although it is expected to start early next week. Miss Hopkins will probably return Monday from her trip to New York.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Isabel Jewell is away on a two-week vacation, and plans to fly to New York from Chicago.

"Wagon Wheels" is now listed as an outdoor picture. The principal roles are to be played by Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick and Billy Lee, with Charles Barton directing. It is now listed as an outdoor romance instead of a Western. Anyway, it's a Zane Grey story, so why not a Western?

Several score of Hawaiian musicians are being used to play for the dance scenes in "Flirtation Walk." This sequence promises to be one of the most spectacular of its type.

ONLY $645* NOW BUYS A DODGE—BIG CAR OFFERED AT "SMALL CAR" PRICE

RECENT PRICE REDUCTIONS GIVE AMERICA THE BIG, 117-INCH WHEELBASE DODGE ACTUALLY FOR LESS THAN MANY SMALL CARS COST

FRANKLY, this message is intended for car buyers who are planning to buy a small car, without realizing that they can own a big Dodge—now that Dodge has invaded the low-price field. Also, for those who want the extra style, bigness and comfort of a car like the great 117-inch wheelbase Dodge.

At today's reduced prices an army of new buyers is switching daily to Dodge. And why not? Dodge quality and dependability are known everywhere, acknowledged by everyone.

Big-Car Comfort!

Many who have been buying higher-priced cars find that Dodge gives them the extra size, the riding comfort, the big-car "feel" plus many features not even found in higher-priced cars. "Floating-Cushion" wheels that step over bumps. Safety all-steel body. Hydraulic brakes that stop extra quick, prevent swerving, yet save tires and brake linings. Modern ventilation with windshield that opens.

COMPARE PRICES

Price comparisons reveal many interesting facts! For instance, Dodge actually costs $80 to $150 less than several cars on the same or shorter wheelbase.

There are 32 of these Dodge features by actual count.

Unusual Operating Economy!

Dodge is in a class by itself for operating economy, too. Many users report 18 to 22 miles on a gallon of gas. There are ten special economy features built right into the car that save up to $100 in upkeep alone. It is savings like these that make Dodge owners so satisfied with their extra-big, extra-comfortable cars.

Dodge price reductions emphasize the necessity of making price comparisons before you buy any car. To help you compare Dodge with rival cars, Dodge has developed a "Show-Down" score card. It shows you, in plain black and white, what Dodge has and what the others have. Lets you put your own valuation on the different features. Enables you to check prices, compare features, and judge for yourself.

Roosevelt Visits Today In Colombia

President Olaya Will Welcome Executive at Cartagena.

Head of South American Republic Formerly Was Envoy Here.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

President Roosevelt, cruising aboard the U. S. S. Houston on his way to the West Coast and then to the Hawaiian Islands, will arrive today at Cartagena, Colombia, where he will be greeted by the President of Colombia, Senor Dr. Enrique Olaya Herrera.

President Olaya will fly from the capital at Bogota with a large official party to welcome President Roosevelt. Thirty planes will take off as soon as the Houston is sighted from Barranquilla, and will escort Mr. Roosevelt into Cartagena.

Capital society takes particular interest in President Olaya, who was Minister of Colombia in Washington for many years before he was called to his own country to be elected first citizen.

Popular in Society.

Both Senor and Senora de Olaya were most popular members of the Diplomatic Corps during their years in Washington, and their two daughters, Maria and Lucia, practically grew up in the Capital. When, after eight years spent in Washington, the family moved to Bogota, they introduced modern conveniences at El Palacio, the White House of Colombia. The executive mansion, which is a beautiful bit of old Spanish architecture with all the charm of such lovely old places, was as old-fashioned as it was lovely, so the Olayas remodeled the building to suit their modern tastes, and at the same time preserved the unique beauty and charm of the palace.

Senor Olaya left his family in Washington when he returned to his country to be elected President, and after the election, as President-elect, came to the Capital to move Senora de Olaya and their daughters to their new home.

Thrilling Homecoming.

The trip was a very thrilling one for Maria and Lucia because they had left their homeland at such an early age that they scarcely remembered it, and added to the thrill of the trip was the glamour of returning as the daughters of the new Chief Executive.

Senor Olaya will be remembered as a very tall and distinguished-looking man, with blue eyes and light brown hair, looking far more like an Englishman than a person of Spanish ancestry.

While he was here as President-elect, he made a trip one day to Mount Vernon and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A little knot of people had gathered in Arlington, attracted by the official cars, uniforms, police guards, and the general holiday air of the group.

"What's all this about?" asked one spectator. "Oh, that's the President of British Columbia. He arrived in town yesterday and they're taking him sightseeing," was the answer from an equally well-meaning observer.

Culbertson on Bridge

There is much more to expert Dummy play than sound technique. The good card player knows the correct type of play to employ and when to employ it—when to draw trumps, when not to draw trumps, when to finesse, when to squeeze, and so on. He also knows the mathematical percentages and the theories of probable divisions of the opposing cards. All of this, however, will not make one a finished Dummy player. The real expert is something of a psychic. He looks at the distributional pattern of his own hand and the Dummy, he listens carefully to the opposing bidding, if any, and then tries to form a mental picture of his opponents' hands. And on the basis of this mental picture, he quite frequently adopts a line of play that seems to go against the percentages.

South, Dealer
North and South vulnerable

	♠ A 10 7 5 4 3 ♡ K J 5 ◇ 8 ♣ 8 3 2
♠ K 6 ♡ 10 9 8 2 ◇ K 10 7 4 3 ♣ J 7	N W E S	♠ — ♡ A Q 7 4 3 ◇ 9 2 ♣ K Q 10 9 6 5

South	West	North	East
1♠(1)	Pass	3♠	4♣
4◇	Pass	4♠	5♣(2)
5♠(3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The five-card major, though weak, must be bid first.
2—East, being not vulnerable, decides to take a deliberate sacrifice against the game contract, which he is sure North and South can make. A set of 450, he knows, will be better than permitting the opponents to make their game.
3—South's reasoning is in the same vein as that of the East player. He knows that to get a good score on the board he will have to defeat East and West four tricks at their five-club contract, and this looks most unlikely from his own holding. Rather than take the surely below average score, South decides to gamble that five spades can be made.

In the play West made his natural Opening of the club Jack, and Declarer won with the Ace. He immediately saw that the fulfillment of his contract depended upon losing no spade tricks. There being no reason to delay the play of the trump suit, South, immediately after winning the first trick, laid down his spade Queen, and the West player quite wisely played the four-spot. South now stoppeed to consider the situation. He knew that, with only two trumps missing, the percentages definitely favored playing for the split rather than for the finesse. However, this particular South player went further. He knew that the mathematical odds did not overwhelmingly favor the split over the finesse. He therefore tried to visualize the type of hand on which any good East player would go to five clubs without any assistance from his partner, and he eventually decided that to justify his bidding the East player would need a very unevenly divided hand and one which in all likelihood did not hold the lone King of spades, as with this card any player in the East seat would have hopes of defense and accordingly be much more reluctant to take a deliberate sacrifice. South knew East must hold the heart Ace and the King and Queen of clubs, and that the King of spades in addition would make him feel that the game contract might very easily be defeated. The Declarer had the courage af his convictions and allowed his Queen of spades to ride around. As a result of this play a potential bottom was turned into a cold top, as the players who played the hand at four spades made only four and two teams who were pushed to five went down to one trick.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Envoy Off for Newport Today To Attend Rochambeau Rites

Mr. Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires, Will Represent France at Dedication of Statue of America's Revolutionary War Ally.

The Charge d'Affaires of France, Mr. Jules Henry, will leave Washington today for Newport, where he will spend the week-end, returning to the Capital next Monday. While in Newport Mr. Henry will be at the Meunchingerking.

Mr. Henry will represent the French Ambassador, Mr. Andre de Laboulaye, on Friday at the dedication in Newport of the monument erected in memory of Marechal Jean Baptiste Donatien de Vimeur, Count Rochambeau, in token of the appreciation of America for the services of the distinguished Frenchman during the Revolutionary days.

The occasion will mark the 154th anniversary of the landing of Rochambeau, Admiral de Ternay and the French armies for the battles which later developed into the American victory at Yorktown. Newport was the exact spot where the French ship landed. The gardens and lawns of the estates of Mrs. Nicholas Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer, now occupy the Frenchmen's point of debarkation.

A French warship, the cruiser D'Entrecasterux, is anchored off the resort, and the Naval Attache of the Embassy, Capt. Louis Sable, who joined the ship in New York, is now also in Newport.

Mr. Henry will be entertained extensively during his stay, officially as guest of honor at numerous parties aboard the ship, and in private homes, and after the ceremonies, by his numerous Washington friends who are summering in Newport.

Alaska Flight Aviators Visit Here Saturday

Plans for Entertainment of Army Fliers Not Yet Settled.

On Saturday a group of Army aviators, under command of Lieut. Col. Henry Arnold, will arrive at Bolling Field for a brief stay before taking off on a mass flight in ten bombing planes for Fairbanks, Alaska, and back to Bolling Field.

Two years ago a similiar group of fliers was in town for several days during which time they were entertained at numerous and interesting parties. A large dance was given for them at the Carlton Hotel, preceeded by many dinner parties. Among the largest of the dinners was one given by the then Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, Mr. F. Trubee Davison, and Mrs. Davison, in the garden of their Georgetown home. Whether or not the officers will be in town long enough for Capital society to entertain them this year has not been settled.

Mr. Davison, with Mrs. Davison, and their four young sons, who are now at Peacock Point, their summer home at Locust Valley, Long Island, will leave next week to spend a month as the guests of Mr. Davison's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Davison, at their ranch in Alberta, Canada.

Sincerity and Intelligence Make Political Personality

Manicures, Clothes, Social Graces and Lovely Figures Are Nice to Have but Nonessential to Women in Public Life, Agree Some of Them.

Women of today need personality to fight the battles of the world as well as to conquer in a drawing room. The following article is the ninth in a series attempting to analyze the personality elements that aid women to meet the challenge of modern living.

By Frances Mangum.

"It's not the way she dresses, nor her figure," says Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, director of the women's division of the Republican National committee.

"And certainly not the extent of her beauty," says Mrs. James H. Wolfe, acting director of the women's division of the Democratic committee.

Women have only been in politics a short time, but they've learned to play the game in a man's way.

"Because in politics a woman has to be twice as good as a man to be as good," commented Mrs. Yost.

"They have to understand first of all what they're driving toward. They have to have a thorough political knowledge. Not the kind that's acquired by a careless scanning of headlines, either. It has to be deliberately and thoughtfully sought.

Read News Intelligently.

"They must learn to read world news with intelligent and relentless discrimination, learn how to square propaganda with fact and to reject it when it isn't square.

"Most of all, a woman must learn to weigh men and women for their worth and not confuse conspicuous position and publicity with valuable service.

"If she isn't naturally a sympathetic person, she must cultivate this trait for it is highly essential for her to meet people understandingly and treat their problems sympathetically.

"If she has these qualities, certainly the way she dresses and her physical appearance in general make very little difference."

The Outstanding Three.

Mrs. Yost cited three women in politics today as possessing certain of these qualities to an outstanding degree.

"Mrs. Edith Rogers, Representative from Massachusetts, is sweet and gentle, yet she has a remarkable force and drive," she said. "Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Senator from Arkansas, certainly has a remarkably sympathetic nature. And Mrs. Florence Kahn, Representative from California, possesses a most delightful sense of humor.

"Naturally, besides developing these essential attributes, there are certain little concrete things the woman in politics has to bear in mind. While it isn't necessary for her to dress up, so to speak, she should, of course, be neat and well groomed. And she should not make long speeches."

Woman's status politically was further backed by Senator Tydings when he declared he did not believe it was possible to differentiate between men and women politicians.

"The traits that are desirable in one are certainly desirable in the other," he said. "I can not see any reason why good looks or social graces should help a woman politically any more than they do a man. And I don't believe they do," he added.

"And speaking of the social graces in politics, they might help. A good voice, an imposing carriage, ease of manner, all these might help. But," he continued emphatically, "they aren't the essential things. It's sincerity, first, last and always, that counts most."

"You take a woman politician who wants to put her personality over well. She's got first of all to win the confidence of the people she's working for, the people who vote. And she can only do this by exhibiting a real and genuine desire to help.

"But nowadays what's true of a woman in politics is true of a man and vice versa."

Knowledge also was cited by Mrs. Wolfe as the most essential attribute in a woman politician.

Policy Knowledge Important.

"A woman before she can do any substantial and lasting kind of political work must have a thorough knowledge of government policies, and if she's working for or in a party, the party policies," said Mrs. Wolfe. "She has to know backward forward, going and coming, how these are worked out through government activities. When she has this knowledge, then she can proceed to put it across, and by doing so put herself across.

"Whereas she can get by without good-looking clothes, without a pretty face, and with almost any kind of figure—not that these might not help!" she laughed. "She simply must have these intangible qualities.

"It helps a lot, too," Mrs. Wolfe continued, "if she's a good handshaker. No matter how friendly she is inside, people might not know it unless she shows it."

What do modern men think of modern women? Washington bachelors answer this question in tomorrow's Post, in the last article of this series.

Three Types of Successful Political Personality

Public Now Less Gullible; College Boy Salesmen Out

By Elizabeth Perrow.

THE words, "I'm working my way through college," have persuaded many a sentimental American to buy a new-fangled lemon squeezer or a "History of the American Bull-frog."

But the once credulous citizen has balked. There aren't enough colleges in America, he reasons, to accommodate the continuous procession of gray-haired old men and raucous-voiced young women who pay their tuition with sales profits.

Today jeers and slammed doors greet the salesman who "pulls this college racket." And this summer there will be few college students "on the road."

"They prefer mowing lawns to selling," said Raymond J. Staeth, assistant business manager of American University, yesterday, discussing ways of working and being educated simultaneously.

"The working student today is not nearly so snooty about his job as students preceding the depression were," he said. "In those days they wanted jobs in lawyers' offices. Today they clerk in grocery stores, nurse children, work in university libraries, or in restaurants and dining rooms in town.

Commission Work.

"In fact they are willing to do any kind of work that pays a regular salary. But they are shy about taking selling jobs. Not only because there is so much antagonism toward canvassers, but because the companies refuse to pay salaries and offer only small commissions."

The college student who wants to work has a harder time finding a job than he did three years ago, Mr. Staeth said.

"But," he added, "I don't believe students are so eager to earn their expenses as they were preceding the depression. They seem to think someone should help them."

Fifty per cent of the students at American University earn part of their expenses by summer jobs and part-time work in the winter, according to Mr. Staeth. "The students who work make just as high grades as those who do not," he said, "and if a student really wants an education he should be encouraged to work and go to school."

Into the office of Mrs. Vinnie G. Barrows, director of women's personnel guidance at George Washington University, hundreds of students go yearly seeking aid in finding jobs. Mrs. Barrows also reports a lack of student interest in selling.

"We often get letters from companies wanting student salesmen," she said, "and we just throw them away. They want the best students we have and they are not willing to pay anything. We never encourage students to accept these jobs.

Bible Seller.

"A few years ago I knew a young man who made several hundred dollars one summer selling Bibles through the country districts of North Carolina and Virginia, but students can not do that today."

Many girls at George Washington get part-time jobs in homes to pay their room and board, according to Mrs. Barrows.

"One girl took a position as chauffeur," she said, "and kept it all the way through college. She used to wear a uniform, and she enjoyed it hugely.

"One woman called in and wanted an athletic girl to teach her small boys stunts. I sent a girl out and she later came back in tears. The woman called up and was most insulting because the girl couldn't stand on her head."

Many George Washington girls work as playground supervisors in the summer; others are camp councilors, waitresses in suburban tea rooms. One girl raised Persian cats to pay her tuition.

"None of the girls like to do domestic work," Mrs. Barrows said, "although many have to. But as a general thing the hours when they are needed in homes conflict with their classroom work. Often they are imposed upon. A girl who is a good stenographer can always get a job. But no student should start to college in a strange town without enough money to pay her tuition for one semester."

Guide to Reduce Divorce Completed by Professor

A guide to personality analysis which may reduce divorce has been completed by Prof. Newman L. Hoopingarner, of the New York University School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance. According to Prof. Hoopingarner, the reduction in divorces will favorably affect human relations in business so labor turnover may be reduced.

The guide, which is in the form of a questionnaire, applies particularly to the emotional aspect of the personality. It makes it possible for the individual to plan for specific improvement in his relations with others.

Those who will be placed in office are Mrs. Marguerite Michel, commander; Mrs. Marguerite Deegan, aid to the commander; Mrs. Murtle Fuller, vice commander; Mrs. Anna Apolonis, marshal; Mrs. Mildred Stanley, chaplain; Mrs. Rose Evans inside guard; Miss Marguerite Lipco, outside guard; Mrs. Ida Stanley, trustee; Mrs. Peggy Waters, mistress of ceremonies; Mrs. Ruth Van Allen, representative to the supreme lodge, and Mrs. M. The woman's auxiliary of the Sandy Spring volunteer fire department is making arrangements for a benefit carnival Wednesday, August 22, at Sherwood School, Sandy Spring, Md.

Mrs. Mortimer O. Stabler is chairman of the committee in charge of the supper. Mrs. Austin La Mar, Mrs. R. Bentley Thomas and Mrs. Roy Davis are also taking an active part in the arrangements.

At a special meeting of presidents and officers of the District of Columbia Chapter of the National Society of Children of the American Revolution, it was decided the chapter would give a play November 11. Mrs. Tonis J. Holzberg will be the director, assisted by a committee of all senior presidents.

The proceeds will be used for a scholarship at Tamassee and for other patriotic work.

Soviets Start 'Gym' While Still Babies

Soviet babies start their daily dozens early.

Their mothers, under government direction, begin giving their offspring a regular exercise routine at the age of 5 months and sometimes earlier. In one Soviet hospital infant gymnastics start at 4 months.

The exercise routine covers a wide range of gymnastics from arm and leg maneuvers to body bendings and even head stands, in which the legs and arms of the infant are grasped tightly by the mother as she holds her baby upside down, the top of his head resting momentarily on a pillow.

Such gymnastics, according to Soviet health directors, will strengthen the baby's muscles, increase his appetite and promote his general development.

Banish Racial Hatreds, Urges Dorothy Canfield

The women of America work together to banish racial and religious hatreds, says Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher, nationally known novelist, who has recently accepted the chairmanship of the Women's Advisory Council of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

"We hope the Women's Advisory Council, through the home, the school, the women's clubs and community will not only exert an important influence in banishing racial and religious hatreds," Mrs. Canfield said, "but will get all women of all faiths to work together for common American ideals for the greater glory of our country."

PILLAR TO POST

MANAGING ATTORNEY JACK SCOTT of NRA confessed he finds it hotter here than he is used to at home.

"To be able to see the great continental divide where the mountains are always covered with snow, makes it seem cooler anyway," he smiled depreciatingly.

It was a piece of cruelty on the part of Representative Lawrence Lewis, of Colorado, when he chose the hottest day in 60 years to show President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau and Postmaster General Farley pictures of his State's mountain lakes and trout streams with the idea of luring them out there this summer.

Secretary Farley complained it was "rubbing it in." Morgenthau did not suffer so acutely as he was looking forward to his trip West, and the President intimated he might take advantage of the invitation upon his return from Hawaii.

• • • •

And then there is Richard L. Strout, of the Christian Science Monitor, bound for Europe and the coolness that is Geneva, who rented his hot Alton Place House for the summer to an innocent family from Maine.

Cigarette Girl.

"THE girl with the beautiful walk" who sells cigarettes on the Shoreham Terrace is college bred and the mother of two children. Doris Major (she uses her maiden name and is the daughter of a Washington artist, M. G. Major) is a cigarette girl because it is more profitable than other work she has tried. She was an expert bookkeeper for a photo-engraving company here.

• • • •

"So many people have spoken to me about the way I walk," laughed Doris, "but I am not conscious of walking in any particular manner. It's just natural, I guess. They tell me that I do not really walk at all, that I fly or glide through the air. But it gets me anywhere I want to go."

Favorite Flowers of Notables Bloom in World's Fair Garden

CHICAGO, July 10 (U.P.).—A garden containing the favorite flowers of presidents, kings, queens, dictators, prime ministers and other important personages of 50 nations has been opened at A Century of Progress.

Letters were sent to the famous persons, asking the name of their favorite flower and authorization to plant it in the garden at the World's Fair.

More than 200 replies were received by J. E. Stauffer, who planned the exhibit. Sixty-nine different flowers were chosen.

77 Take Roses.

Roses, it was discovered, were most favored. Seventy-seven persons selected that flower. Next in order of popularity were carnations, gardenias, lilies of the valley and orchids.

President Roosevelt's favorite is the mountain laurel; his second choice the rhododendron. In his honor the largest specimen plants of kalmia (mountain laurel) and rhododendron ever planted in Chicago were brought from the mountains of North Carolina and are in bloom in the World's Fair garden.

Mrs. Roosevelt's choice was pansies and yellow roses. A special bed of these flowers was planted, to be known as Mrs. Roosevelt's garden.

Carnations for Royalty.

It appeared that a favorite of royalty is the carnation. Queen Maud of Norway, King Gustave of Sweden and the King of Denmark preferred it. Kaiser Wilhelm chose the rose, as did the Queen of Denmark and the King of Yugoslavia.

The President of France preferred the violet; the President of Guatemala, the pink carnation; Kemal Pasha of Turkey, the carnation; President Lin Sen of China, the chrysanthemum; President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia, the carnation, and President Martinez of Salvador, the hyacinth.

A special bed called the dictators' garden was planted. The dominant flower there is edelweiss, the choice of both Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Premier Dollfuss of Austria. Mussolini wrote that he is a lover of all flowers and could not choose among them. Gen. Italo Balbo, however, expressed a preference for the red rose.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What can you do with your parents when they insist on sitting in the next room when you are entertaining girls and boys? It isn't that we want to do or say anything that my mother wouldn't approve of, but when she sits there in the dining room, with the door open into the living room where we are, it just sort of throws ice water over everything. Do you know what I mean, and if so can you help me?

ALICE R.

Mother Will Understand.

DEAR ALICE R.: If your parents insist on sitting in the next room when you are entertaining boys and girls, there's little you or any one else can do about it.

But if your statement is not to be taken too literally, try persuasive logic. Approach mother first. Mother is usually eager to have all her daughters belles and all her sons beaux in the social circle in which they move.

• • • •

But she can scarcely achieve this eminently satisfying state for her offspring if she denies them opportunity of extending gay, unembarrassed hospitality to congenial contemporaries. For in no other way can they so completely acquire that generous, considerate, expansive warmth of personality that outstrips beauty, brains, vivacity, style, grace or what-have-you in the race for popularity.

Tactfully indicate as much to mother. If her past presence in the adjoining room has been simply thoughtless, she will doubtless beat a hasty and smiling retreat after greeting the next group of youngsters who come calling.

• • • •

Maybe she takes up her post in the next room from a conviction that chaperonage is essential in stamping her children as socially correct and hence socially desirable. If so, she's a little out of step with the times. Modern youngsters who have been well brought up choose their associates by an intuitive measuring stick that takes little account of the more conventional amenities.

Winning mother over to your side usually takes care of father. The male parent as a rule readily indorses mother's stand.

Miss Haworth gives confidential advice when so requested. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope or make a personal appointment by telephoning National 4200.

Cheating Impossible on New Double Bicycles

MODERN maidens have revived the bicycle built for two. Unlike women bicyclists of the nineties, they are not content to be sweet passengers, they do their own pedaling. And on the new two seater models they pedal in unison.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

YOU can't ride a bicycle in a top hat. This proves that the revival of bicycling must stop somewhere.

Not only is there renewed activity in plants turning out the ordinary delivery-boy type of wheel, but tandems are being manufactured wholesale for the first time since the 90s.

The latest type of wheel that is being seen in Washington, D. C., is built for two with a vengeance, for the riders are side by side instead of one before the other, a great stimulus to conversation and the friendly spirit. The riders must pedal in unison, no cheating allowed.

There is a rising tide of bicycles in the country that has not been equaled since long before the war. Perhaps it's due to the return of that famous song. Which, in turn, leaves the blame at the doors of the stylists who started our minds turning backward in their flights.

Marathons, which always draw large crowds, may be getting in their stroke. The first children who watched the first six-day bicycle race may now be coming of age.

It's a menace, anyway. All very well for pleasant exercise in the country, or a sensible way of getting somewhere, when there isn't a taxi or a bus.

But mixed with city traffic, or indulged in through a mistaken idea of quaintness or graceful motion, bicycling is a mistake.

Urge to Paint Now Gratified With Success

By Ruth Anne Davis.

YESTERDAY there came an enthusiastic letter about a new pain preparation. The writer says, "I am sure Washington housewives who have to make both ends meet on rather limited budgets will be glad to hear of a paint that will do their good taste justice. I shall never forget the horror and the sadness that took possession of me when I arrived at our apartment after a visit and found a cabinet done in what-the-man-and-the-chart said was jade green. My husband, who knew I wanted it done in jade green, had surprised me by painting it during my absence. This instance is no doubt responsible for my enthusiasm for this new aid to exact color in painting."

There remained no doubt that this must be worth looking into. For when the urge to paint seizes upon you, and it does seize upon us all, what a help to be able to pick the exact color, and not risk mistakes when they're too late to remedy.

Every one of us wishes at some time or other to swing the paint brush and bring color to the home. The first move is to buy the paint. We bend over the color chart, adjust the eyeglasses and pick out not always what we had in mind, but the nearest thing to it. Then home we trot and limber up the old paint brush and begin. Then comes the disillusionment! The green bears only the faintest family resemblance to the color chart. It couldn't by any possibility be used with the other colors in the room. We end by giving up.

This new paint preparation is an excellent way to give the true color to the amateur painter. In a glass jar are colors blended by artists and secured by a special chemical discovery against change. You buy pure white paint and add the color when you're ready. Thus you get exactly the color you have selected on the chart.

For the Droops.

A beauty expert who has always enjoyed a success with her preparations is featuring a chin strap which combats drooping chins and cheeks, lines in front of the ears, and sagging creepy throats.

It's a simple contrivance that doesn't look offhand as though it were half competent to undertake these serious improvements. But once fastened securely in accordance with stated directions it sets to work to mold, or remold, the contour of the chin and face by supporting important muscles.

Unlike many similar gadgets this accomplishes a world of improvement in just 15 minutes. It should, however, be worn anywhere from 15 minutes to an hour, depending on the "droops" and the amount of leisure time available.

* * * *

Girdles for the Girlish.

Now is the time for all good shoppers to come to the aid of their figures! The corset department of an F street store has been "taken over" and is being literally "done over." Most of the old stock is being sold out at reduced prices to make room for new fall buys. In the meantime it's possible to pick up amazing bargains there.

Some business girl girdles of a favorite make have always sold for $3.50. Even at sales they have maintained a steady price and if there was any trend at all it was upward. Now they're going for $1.75.

These are light, comfortable and not at all the burdensome garments some girdles are. Due to the rate they're going, there are only broken sizes available, but it's well worth looking into.

* * * *

Organdy Goes Down.

There seems to be an epidemic of sales. For further down the street at another large store organdy blouses are down from two dollars to one.

Women who read of sales of this kind with a cynical gleam in their eyes are apt to say, "reduced nothing. It's a special buy to bait us at this price." But not so! The former price tags are still on these blouses so the customer can see what bargains they are getting.

In all there are about half a dozen different sizes in a wide variety of colors. And don't forget, a light, fluffy organdie blouse gives a flattering, feminine touch to a summer suit.

* * * *

Lighthouse Flashlight.

Most shoppers are familiar by this time with the "lighthouse table lamps," but chances are not so many of them have seen the new lighthouse flashlights, recent arrivals at a local shop. They're ideal for a small boy's birthday gift. And they're only $1.

Solution to a Week-End

A Three-Piece Sports Outfit Shuffled Makes Three More

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Spring this one on the family some day soon. Just announce free-and-easy like, "I bought four new outfits today." Then when the hub-bub over your extravagance dies down, take them down a peg by showing the newest summer idea—the one sports outfit with four ways of wearing.

It certainly is a solution of what to take on a week-end. Or a vacation.

It consists of three pieces. First a one-piece sports dress, with or without a low-cut tennis back. Next a matching jacket of about finger-tip length. And third, an extra overblouse.

You wear it these four ways:

1. The dress alone. It is simply cut, usually with action pleats in the skirt and often in the blouse, and with cap or short sleeves. Fine for golf or tennis.

2. The dress with the jacket. This way it is the perfect spectator sports costume. Or it can even go "down town" or to luncheon at the country club and other such informal places.

3. The dress with the overblouse. This blouse is made in a harmonizing but contrasting color. Or usually it is colors, since it's most apt to to be plaid, striped, dotted or printed.

4. Dress, overblouse and jacket. And in either of these last two versions is an extra gay sort of spectator sports costume.

The dress and jacket are generally made of silk crepe or acetate in some interesting weave. The blouses are of sheer cotton, ginghams or prints.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

The Ever-Favorite Banana Can Be Served Many Different Ways.

By Susan Mills.

BANANAS have always been a favorite fruit and can not be served too often. Children cry for them, adults appreciate them served, not only as a fruit, but as a vegetable course.

There are ways and ways of serving this versatile fruit. Baked and broiled, fried or raw, sweetened or plain, in desserts or salads.

No Matter how many ideas you may have, a few more might be handy.

Banana and Ham Sandwich.

Mix 2½ ounce can deviled ham and 2½ crushed bananas thoroughly. Spread mixture between buttered slices of bread, with or without lettuce leaves. Makes 6 to 8 sandwiches.

Bananas and Bacon.

Roll half lengths of peeled bananas in strips of bacon. Secure with toothpick, if necessary. Broil under flame or bake in oven-proof dish in a hot oven (450 degrees fahrenheit) about 15 minutes, or until bananas are tender and bacon crisp. Baste at least once during the baking. Whole bananas may be wrapped in bacon and cooked in the same way.

Stuffed Baked Applees.

1½ cups sugar
¼ cup water
6 apples
1 or 2 bananas
1 tablespoon butter
6 marshmallows

Make a syrup by boiling sugar and water together three minutes. Core apples and pare tops. Fill cavities with thinly sliced bananas and arrange in a baking pan. Pour syrup over them and bake about half an hour, until tender, in moderate oven (385 degrees F.). When done, dot each apple with a little butter and baste well with remaining syrup; then place marshmallow on each and put back into oven to brown. Serves six.

Banana Cake.

½ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
2 cups flour
½ teaspon baking powder
¾ teaspon soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup sour milk
1 cup mashed bananas (2 or 3 bananas)
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cream, whipped and sweetened
2 bananas, sliced.

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Stir in the well-beaten eggs. Sift flour, baking powder soda and salt together, and add alternately with the sour milk and bananas, which have been mashed through a sieve. Flavor, pour into greased and floured layer cake pans, and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven, (375 degrees F.). When layers are cold, put together with whipped cream and sliced bananas, and spread whipped cream over the top of cake. Garnish with slices of banana. Banana frosting may be used instead of the whipped cream. Serves six.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Tatiana Tchernavin is telling the story of her own experiences in Russia from the time of the revolution in 1918. In yesterday's instalment of this fact story, 48 persons were put to death. Now go on with the author's dramatic recital.

MY son felt nervous when it was time to go to bed.

"Will you sit beside me?" he asked, pitifully.

"Yes, of course. You get into bed."

He hid under the bedclothes; we talked of various things, then were silent, trying to hide our thoughts from each other. The child seemed more grownup every day.

"They persecuted Galileo and Copernicus."

I explained to him how far the story he had heard at school of Copernicus and Galileo was true. He had been told that both men were simply fighting against religion and the church and—for the sake of simplifying matters—that both were burnt at the stake by the Inquisition.

"And now?"

"Go to sleep, darling, it's late. I'll tell you another time." Obediently and wearily he closed his eyes, guessing that I had no answer to give him.

Fear for Father.

I understood what his question meant; he thought that if he knew why people were put to death, he might find out whether his father would be shot. His father was still at home, but we dared not believe in his safety. We were glad of every day that passed hoping that time might save him.

"Mother, how many Decembrists did they shoot in 1825?"

"Five?"

"And when Lenin's brother tried to kill the Czar?"

"Also five. Only they were hanged and not shot."

"Does that make any difference?"

I said nothing, because I had not the strength to speak.

"Mother, and why was it so many this time—forty-eight?"

"Times are different. You'll understand some day; it's not so simple."

Fearful Expectation.

When the boy dropped asleep, time dragged on more slowly than ever. My husband and I had nothing to hide from each other; we sat on the sofa and waited. What were we waiting for? There is only one thing that everyone waits for at night, when ever minute is filled with the strain of expectation—the OGPU.

Ten o'clock. It was too early for them. We were talking of something else, but more and more slowly and absent-mindedly.

Eleven o'clock. They might come soon now. Loud steps were heard in the yard . . . on the stairs. . . . My hear throbbed desperately. No, it was not here.

Twelve o'clock. They might come any minute.

"That was how they took F.," my husband recalled. "He had just come from the office—he had some work to finish and stayed there till midnight. What donkeys we are! How we have worked—and all to earn a bullet through the head!"

"Poor, dear F.! How kind he was and naive as a child. He trusted everyone."

Time Dragged.

We could scarcely hold back our tears. It seemed unthinkable that that man whom everyone had loved for his sweet disposition, who had never hurt anyone, had been disgraced as a "wrecker" and killed.

Time crept on more and more slowly. Every minute seemed to drag. There were footsteps in the yard; people were returning from evening work, from the theater. . . . Some came up our stairs, others walked past, but I listened breathlessly to them all. My mouth was parched; I felt cold and then hot all over. There was a pain in my heart as though it had been bruised.

One o'clock in the morning. The yard was growing quiet; the gates were locked. Half an hour passed quietly. Suddenly there was a sharp ring at the gate. There they were . . . sure to be. Thud of footsteps and loud conversation. No, two drunken men.

Two in the morning. The trams stopped. Everything seemed still . . . No! There was the hoot of a motor . . . the OGPU car. The revolting, piercing sound came nearer and nearer . . . No, it went past.

Tyranny Feared.

Every time my heart throbbed, ready to burst; I listened, trembling. When danger was over, I felt limp and cold and weak. Was it because we were cowards? No, it was not death we feared; it was unbearable to feel oneself at the mercy of a stupid, cruel tyranny from which there was no defense, no escape.

Three in the morning. It was late, but they still might come. The OGPU had so much "work" just now that they were at it all night. And so we sat up till daybreak. If one dropped asleep, dreams were worse than reality. In sleep one loses one's will power and suffers more acutely and hopelessly.

"People are afraid of wild beasts, of bears," said my husband, following his strange, weary thoughts. "But a bear doesn't attack one, if he has had enough to eat. And one doesn't go empty-handed to fight a bear. But they will goad me like a beast in a cage. Oh, if only the end would come soon!" he cried out suddenly.

"Hush, you will wake the boy."

That was how we, women, tried to slur things over; telling the boy "go to sleep, it's late" and the father, "don't wake the boy."

Months of Fear.

We had a month of it, night after night. Sometimes, in utter exhaus- my husband said:

"Let me die. It will make things simpler; they won't touch you and the boy if I am gone."

"You mustn't talk like that. Let us think of something else." We took an atlas and looked at maps. A free, wide world was unfolded before us, calling us away. There people might be poor, might be suffering from the economic crisis, but anyway they were free. In the map of U.S.S.R., from Yakutsk to Karelia all the swamps, tundras and wild forests were centers for penal camps. Their population numbered over a million, although the mortality in them was more than 60 per cent a year.

"If they send us to the Far East, we might try to escape just here," said he, pointing to the map. "And then to Japan—they won't give us away there."

"Not much chance of being sent there, and from Yakutsk it is far to the frontier. I only hope it won't be to Solovki."

"The Caspian is the worst of all," my husband said. "They are making penal camps there, too."

"Why is it the worst?"

"Sea, sandy desert, and they say that Turks give away the escaped prisoners. But still it may be possible even there. We'll escape, won't we?"

"We will," I answered, firmly.

Frenchman Sees U. S. in 24 Days

It takes only 24 days to see "all America, all Americans and everything American," believes Emile Schreiber, French journalist and economist.

And having spent 24 days touring America he has returned to France to write a series of articles about his trip.

M. Schreiber, accompanied by his wife, had visited America 20 years ago, and returned to describe that trip in a book, "The American Example."

"America is changed," he conceded on his return trip, "it is bigger, but better. The buildings are larger, your people, especially the women, are so much taller."

In their survey of "all America," M. and Mme. Schreiber visited Charleston, New Orleans, San Francisco, Rochester, Omaha, and the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m.

Activities on this July 11 will largely consist in efforts to obtain new business and closing up pending deals. It is a very good day upon which to start new business negotiations. It might prove advisable to recheck on correspondence, for there is a possibility of an important matter being neglected through oversight.

Drivers of any type of conveyances should exercise the greatest amount of care during the day, and above all things avoid getting into any arguments. Be wary of a stranger that may solicit your financial aid, especially if it relates to some form of a publicity stunt given, supposedly, for charity.

Be Active Socially.

An investigation is advisable, before parting with money. The social side of life should be stimulated by your taking an active part. The relaxation you might receive by temporarily forgetting business affairs might pay you to make the exertion to arrange some form of entertainment which will prove a diversion and give you something else to think about. The evening of July 11 should be a favorable one for the lovelorn and those desiring to hear their virtues extolled.

If a woman and born on July 11, you possibly possess all the attributes essential for popularity, and these traits should prove of great value in either a business or social career. The enthusiastic support of friends may prove most helpful. There is every likelihood of your receiving an agreeable surprise. A man may play a very important part in your life, and have a decided influence over your future career. Problems involving money should not prove serious, and as a general thing easily solved. One of the arts offers unlimited opportunities for a person possessing your artistic temperament. You are very likely the type that will get a great deal of happiness out of life, married or single.

Attractive Child.

The child born on July 11 should, as it grows up, develop a most attractive personality, and prove a continuous source of gratification to its parents.

The man born on July 11, as a rule, is by natural instinct an excellent businessman, an excellent trader, and a good conversationalist. If born on this date, you have the happy faculty of attracting people to you, and being able to win their affection and trust. Either in a profession or the commercial world you should be able to eventually accumlate a considerable sum of money. Obstacles may arise, but perseverance will enable you to surmount them. You will find greater happiness married than leading a solitary life.

Successful people born on July 11:
Timothy Flint, author.
Samuel L. Dana, chemist.
John H. Hewitt, poet.
Susan Warner, novelist.
Edward J. Phelps, diplomat.

Case Involving Workers Goes To Law Court

Right to Work for Pay in the Home, Subject of Budd Case.

NEW YORK, July 10 (Spl.)—Woman's right to work for pay in her home is the subject of a test case that Mrs. Katherine Budd, mother of two small children, has taken to the Supreme Court of the State.

The case will affect about 300,000 home workers in the State of New York. About 60 per cent of these are mothers, who maintain they have no other means of supporting their families.

Mrs. Budd has been supporting her children by making artificial flowers in her home. The NRA has declared such work illegal. Since appealing her case to the Supreme Court, Mrs. Budd has won a point, Supreme Justice Schmuck having ordered Elmer F. Andrews, State commissioner of labor, to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not be issued forcing him to license Mrs. Budd to continue work.

Mrs. Budd says she cannot work in the factory of Jacob De Long, to which she sells flowers, because the care of her children necessitates her presence at home.

In an affidavit on which Mrs. Budd got her order to show cause, she stated she had no other means of supporting herself and children and that if she were stopped she would have to apply to relief agencies. She said she had been earning from $18 to $25 a week.

Children's Puppet Shows Entertain New Yorkers

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance.

The disease commonly but incorrectly known as St. Vitus' dance has been recognized for several centuries. The symptoms usually include a low grade fever; spontaneous movements of almost any part of the body, particularly twitching of the muscles of the face, hands, and legs; and marked weakness. The child moves the muscles involuntarily and no amount of scolding can remedy the situation. Frequently children are thought to be impudent, and if the onset is gradual, may be accused of making faces.

Many observes have noted the relationship between chorea and rheumatism in children and have reported that 20 per cent of their chorea patients gave a history of a previous attack of rheumatic fever. The disease usually occurs in children between the ages of 5 and 15 and girls are more susceptible than boys.

The treatment consists in removing the child from surroundings likely to cause excitement, and in as complete rest as circumstances will permit.

Because of its probable bacterial origin, as soon as the child has recovered from the attack every effort should be made to build resistance and, in order to accomplish this, all avenues of infection should be removed. Teeth, tonsils, and sinuses need to be carefully investigated. This is important because of the tendency of chorea to recur. New infections, such as colds or undue excitement and nervous strain should be avoided.

Sometimes children who have had chorea will develop an occasional habit spasm, such as a twitching of the mouth, winking of the eyelids, or movements involving turning or jerking of the head.

Walt Mason, Himself

Disappointment.

I read a book by James B. Smith and find it blithe and gay; he doesn't pause to wrestle with the problems of the day. He doesn't dwell on human wrecks who find the sledding rough; he hasn't much to say of sex, or any threadbare stuff. He merely tells a pleasant tale, with action swift and hot, in which the virtues all prevail, and villainy gets shot. "Now, by the rood," I tell my aunt, and also tell my niece, "here is a book that might enchant the clergy and police. The author doesn't sprain his neck, a lesson to impart, he merely does his best, by heck, to tell a story smart. His tale is full of pep and pith, and I shall watch and wait for other books by J. B. Smith and buy them by the crate." Another book that bears his name has just been put on sale; I walked so fast it made me lame, to buy "The Tinhorn Tale." In this the author tries to show how he can analyze the divers springs of human woe, the passions as they rise. He doubtless thinks he's cutting ice and bringing bacon home; the reader just regrets the price he paid for such a tome. Why don't the authors write such books as made their pristine fame; if they can write of sleuths and crooks, why tackle Shakespeare's game?

Spotted Fever Claims Child

Two Others Stricken by Germ-Carrying Ticks in Virginia.

Germ-carrying ticks, which transmit dreaded spotted fever, have caused the death of one Woodbridge, Va., child, and infection of another. They also have given the disease to an elderly man.

The child, Linwood Arrington, 18-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arrington, died yesterday in Alexandria (Va.) Hospital, where he was taken after he suffered from the disease for about three weeks. Public health authorities said there was no doubt that the youngster had died from spotted fever, which is communicated by ticks as they bite their victims.

At least one other child has the fever in Woodbridge, authorities learned. Several others are being watched for suspicious symptoms. Hospital officials in Alexandria said yesterday that they had treated a 50-year-old man for the pestilence, and that he now has recovered.

Aware of the cases, health officials from Washington and Prince William and Fairfax Counties, Va., are making efforts to stamp out the disease. They have as yet found no way to counteract it or stop its speed.

There are plants that trap insects and devour them, but, strange as it seems, there is also an aquatic plant, the bladderwort, which actually fishes for food. It catches small fish as well as ...atic insects and feeds on their bodies.

The plant is characterized by little bladders filled with air to buoy up the leaves during the flowering ser... At other t... these bladders are filled with water, and the plant is beneath the surface.

It is with these sacs that the plant does its fishing. The neck of each bladder is provided with bristles which allow bugs and small fish to enter, but which cut off escape by straightening out after the prey is trapped. Products of decay arising from the trapped fish are used as nourishment by the plant.

Frank J. Marshall, who has been American chess champion since 1909, once demonstrated that he could retain the progress of 155 separate chess games in his mind at the same time. Pitted against 155 different players at as many boards, he passed quickly from one game to another—and finished with 126 victories, 21 draws and 8 defeats.

Labor Union Hits Hot Dog Stands

Norfolk, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Some barbecue and hot dog stands are employing girls without paying them any wages, it was charged at a Central Labor Union meeting last night.

These concerns, it was claimed, are under the NRA code applied to restaurants, and the labor body decided to complain direct to the code compliance board of the State. It is claimed that girls employed at these stands receive their only compensation in tips and are required to work long hours.

The body reaffirmed its former protest against employment of convict labor in the making of fixtures used in State liquor stores, the high price for whisky charged in the stores and the long hours the employes are required to work. Resolutions of protest, drafted by a committee headed by J. Fred Cherry, will be forwarded to the alcoholic beverage control board today.

Rehoboth Beach Mail Needs Extra Employes

Rehoboth Beach, Del., July 10 (Spl.).—The volume of outgoing mail from the Rehoboth Beach postoffice reached such proportions yesterday that an additional employe was added to the postal staff, Daniel B. Conant, postmaster, said today.

Mr. Conant stated that it was the first time in the history of the local postoffice that extra help was necessary during July, the additional employes generally being placed on the pay roll in August, when vacation trade was at its highest here. Postal receipts here showed a 5 per cent increase for June, 1934, over June, 1933, Mr. Conant added.

Virginia Firms Win Fight on Insurance

Richmond, July 10 (AP).—A controversy has developed here over the plan by which the State of Virginia shall place its insurance, with a battle between foreign and Virginia companies for the business.

Policies covering trucks of the State highway department precipitated the situation, which called forth a declaration of policy from Commissioner Henry G. Shirley today.

He stated that in cases where premium rates were identical the business of the State would go to Virginia companies with the exception that where mutual companies offered a dividend, that would be taken into consideration. He said he considered it his duty to save the State money when possible.

[RECENT OLD GOLD CONVERT]

Dear Miss Lombard:—

You will agree that all smokers, both men and women, prefer a cigarette that's easy on the throat . . . rather than harsh and raspy.

But Old Gold's throat-ease has an additional appeal. The absence of artificial flavoring in Old Gold not only makes it a smoother smoke . . . but a cleaner smoke . . . less apt to stain the teeth or to leave objectionable odor in the clothes or on the breath.

We do not say that Old Gold is the only good cigarette for the fastidious woman smoker. But we do say there is no purer or finer cigarette made.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—To put it in a nutshell, Miss Lombard:

Hubbell Had Americans Licked, Could Have Gone On and On—Gallico

Frills, Thrills 10c a Dozen At Game

Landis, Leagues' Heads and a Host of Other Notables Attend.

Lewis F. Atchison
(Post Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, July 10.—It was a gay and colorful crowd that literally hung from the rafters of the gayly-bedecked Polo Grounds this afternoon for the second annual battle between All-Star teams of the American and National Leagues, a battle that already has grown to be one of baseball's greatest attractions and most thrilling spectacles.

Ideal weather was the weather man's donation to the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America, beneficiary of the contest.

Lured into Mr. Stoneham's horseshoe amphitheater by the presence of their favorite stars, some of them baseball immortals, a capacity throng of more than 53,000 fans shoved into the inclosure, assuring the financial success of the affair.

Host of Notables.

A host of notables, including Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of the sport; John A. Heydler, president of the National League, and William Harridge, president of the younger circuit who occupied infield boxes.

A crowd of approximately 1,300 fans was in line eager to obtain the precious pastebords, which were selling at a premium, when the gates swung wide at 9 o'clock this morning, and by noon half the available seats were occupied.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, slated to throw out the first ball, was unable to attend because of pressing business, and this formality was dispensed with.

McGraw Paid Tribute.

Promptly at 1 o'clock members of both teams gathered in center field, where a memorial tablet was dedicated to the late John McGraw, one of the game's greatest figures and pilot of the National League All-Star combination last year.

At 1:15 o'clock the teams lined up again, this time in front of the plate, while Carl Hubbell, of the New York Giants and starting pitcher for the Nationals, received the plaque emblematic of his selection as the most valuable player in his league for 1933.

By this time the fans were yelling for some baseball, and the managers were ready to discuss ground rules with the umpires, but Bill Terry neglected to join the conference at the plate, sending Frankie Frisch, field captain, and second baseman, in his stead. Joe Cronin, Walter Johnson and Al Schacht represented the American Leaguers.

Gehringer's beautiful stop of Traynor's hard drive in the fifth was nullified when he booted it out of the glove. It went for a hit and scored Pepper Martin from third.

"Ducky-Wucky" Medwick hit a home run in his second turn at bat, so Bill Terry benched him for Chuck Klein in the fifth. There's a guy that's hard to please. Klein singled to right.

In the fifth the Americans pulled an unusual play, a force-out at second, Chapman in left field, to Cronin. Klein on first and Traynor on second started running with the crack of Melvin Ott's bat. They scrambled back when it looked as though Chapman had the ball, but he dropped it and made the play at second on Klein, while Traynor went to third.

Frisch Hit Proves It's a Small World

Crash! went Lefty Gomez' second pitch of the game into the second tier of the right-field bleachers for a home run off the bat of Frankie Frisch in the American-National League All-Star game today.

Among the denizens of the bleachers it sailed until a brawny fist reached up to pluck it out of the air. The man who made the catch was Frank Pompea, New York carpenter, who had spent the morning working with Frisch repairing the latter's New Rochelle homestead.

Ellerslie Team Bats .340 to Take Pennant

Cumberland, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Paced by their hard-hitting catcher, Wenrich, the Ellerslie Cardinals, as a team, hammered the horsehide at a .340 clip in scoring 17 victories and losing four games to win the first-half championship of the Potomac Valley League.

In 20 contests, Wenrich had a batting average of .390, while Fred Porter took runner-up honors with a percentage of .378. Ten of the 15 players on the squad hit the ball above the .300 mark during the first-half race. John Lowery, with six wins and no defeats was the team's leading pitcher.

Medwick Bats National Leaguers Into 4-Run Lead in Third

Beer Demand As Americans Celebrate

POLO GROUNDS, New York, July 10 (AP).—Max Baer yelled for beer after he lifted the heavyweight boxing title from Primo Carnera and so did the American League all-star baseball players today after they had scored their second annual victory over a hand-picked team of National League satellites.

Using a two-hand grip on his bottle of suds, Joe Cronin, the boy manager of the Washington Nationals and pilot of the American League forces, took a big swallow and then launched into a eulogy of his players.

"The boys were real hustlers, every blooming one of them," Joe said. "They won the ball game and the manager had little to do with it. My one regret is that I wasn't able to use every man on the squad."

Mates Applaud Harder.

"Nice work Mel," the other players chorused.

Walter Johnson, once the "Big Train" of baseball and now manager of the Cleveland Indians, elbowed his way through the crowd around Harder and said:

"You pitched like a real veteran today. I'm mighty proud of you."

Cronin overheard the remark and spoke with a great deal of feeling as he gave Johnson, who coached for the Americans at first base, at least half the credit for the victory.

"Walter, I owe you a great deal of thanks," Joe said, and then Cronin explained that when Johnson planned to pitch Harder against the White Sox a few days ago he pleaded with the "big train" to keep Mel fresh for the all-star game.

"I figured we'd need some mighty fine pitching for the last innings," Cronin said, "and Harder sure gave it to us. Harder, who entered the game in the fifth inning and limited the Nationals to one hit, said he "just mixed them up, that's all."

Foes Praise Hubbell.

Second to the Americans' joy over their victory was their admiration for King Carl Hubbell, the Giants' southpaw ace, who held them to two hits, a walk and struck out six in three innings.

Cronin: "He's the greatest pitcher I ever faced. He can throw the ball through a knothole."

Babe Ruth: "He's a great pitcher, you can't take that away from him. I couldn't even see the ball when he threw it."

Ben Chapman: "It was worth the price of admission alone to see him strike out Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx."

Lou Gehrig: "He's plenty good and tough."

Next door, in the Nationals' dressing room, there was almost tomblike silence in an atmosphere of gloom.

Bill Terry, the Giants' manager and boss of the National stars, summed it up with the remark: "It was Joe Cronin's day and he deserved it."

The general feeling was that today's defeat was just a temporary setback for the Nationals and that they would make up for it in the world series.

Dickey walked, filling the bases. Only one of Mungo's pitches to Dickey was a strike. Averill, with a two-and-one count, drove the ball down the right-field line for a double, scoring Foxx and Simmons and sending Dickey to third. Gehringer was purposely passed, filling the bases. Cronin Is Hero In Field and At Plate

Drives in 2 of Stars' Runs, Makes 5 Hard Stops; Manush Halted.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, July 10 (Spl.).—Washington got an even break out of the All-Star classic, a check-up on Nat players in the game reveals. Holding high the champion's standard was their peerless manager, Joe Cronin, who shone brilliantly at shortstop and at bat. On the other hand, Heinie Manush, left fielder, and the American League's leading batsman at the moment, did not fare so well.

Heine walked on his first appearance at the plate, grounded out to Frankie Frisch at second the next time, and his last chance at the plate popped up to Traynor at third. He had no chances in the field.

Cronin drove in the American League's first run of the game with a sizzling drive down the third-base line in the fourth, scoring Al Simmons, who had doubled. He drove in a second run in the person of Simmons again, with a long single to left in the sixth.

Accepts Hard Chances.

Joe was a human meteor afield, accepting five chances in the field without a miscue, and all were difficult. He coaxed round after round of applause from the fans by his brilliant work and indelibly stamped himself as one of the truly great shortstops of the sport.

Crowds, important games and difficult chances seem to go hand in hand with the Frisco Irishman. The Washingtonians here had their fingers crossed for fear someone might have tapped an easy roller to him. Possibly he wouldn't have muffed it, then again he might have. He's funny that way.

Jack Russell did not get into action. He was the American's last pitcher and should have hurled the ninth, but with Harder breezing along in fine style and victory imminent, Jack was held on the sidelines.

Martinsburg Net Victor.

Martinsurg, W. Va., July 10.—The Martinsburg Tennis Club team won easily over the Millwood Country Club team at Boyce, Va., Saturday, eight matches to one. The match was Martinsburg's sixth of the season and their record to date stands at four wins, one tie and one loss. The Millwood team will play a return match here this Saturday.

Young Star's Mastery Had His Foes Jumping at Every Pitch.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, July 10 (Spl.).—Well, you may close up the books on the great All-Star game of 1934 for me. A slim, tanned fellow with the number 14 pinned to his back has gone trotting off the field toward the locker rooms while a crowd of upward of 50,000 lovers of pure baseball covered his departure with crashing applause and cheers that lingered long after the figure in cream-white had taken the last pat on the back from ecstatic bleacherites who leaned far out of the stand by the locker room door in the center field stands to touch the wonderful shoulder of the man who, with two men on base and none out in the first inning, had struck out Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx in succession.

It was, of course, Carl Hubbell, the great left-hander of the New York Giants. His departure was in the nature of the game being played, each pitcher being scheduled for three innings, if he could get that far. When Hubbell waved goodby to the adoring multitude he left the Nationals in the lead by 4 to 0. He had given two hits and he had fanned in succession, in addition to the first three named, the esteemed Messrs. Simmons and Cronin.

Complete Mastery.

Those of us who watched him operate will treasure his brief period on the mound as some of the greatest innings of baseball ever pitched. Hubbell's complete mastery of the hitting stars of the American League was all the more sharply outlined against what happened to his successors. Lon Warneke and Van Lingle Mungo. Two innings after Hubbell turned his back on the field that he had held literally in the hollow of his lean left paw, the score was 8 to 4 in favor of the American League.

They may tell you that Hubbell was bearing down because he had only three innings to go and that he couldn't have continued at the pace he was going.

To me that is bunk and high nonsense. He'd have taken the boys for nine much the way he hooked them for three, because when he struck out Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in order, the American League was whipped. All he had to do then was feint at the boys. The American Leaguers were jumping at his wind-up the way Carnera nearly jumped out of his skin the time Baer feinted at him and hollered "boo!" Of all the stars on the field today, Hubbell was the brightest.

In Deep Trouble.

Two minutes after the game opened Hubbell was in as deep trouble as he will ever be in in his lifetime of pitching. Gehringer, the first man up for the Americans, rapped a single to right and took second on Berger's sloppy handling of the ball. Working too carefully to keep the ball out of the groove for the slugging Manush, the little screw ball artist walked him. And there you have it. None out. Men on first and second. And Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx coming up. What odds that the Americans wouldn't score at least one run? Hundred to one? Don't be cheap. It is difficult to figure what the exact odds should be, but they must have been close to 500 to 1.

The first man he had to face had hit 699 home runs during his 20 years' career and was always apt to crack one in spite of his advancing years. The second is the greatest slugger in the American League today and a great home run hitter. The third was once a member of

Real Brain Trust! Pilots of 9 Teams In All-Star Game

Polo Grounds, New York, July 10.—There was enough baseball brains in evidence at the All-Star game to win any given number of pennants, world series, or even meet the White House Brain Trust A. C. in a game of two-knocker. Four American League managers participated, physically or mentally, and ditto for five Nationals.

All the Americans save one, Walter Johnson, of Cleveland, still occupy regular berths on their respective teams. They are: Cronin, Washington; Cochran, Detroit, and Dykes, Chicago. Cronin and Cochran were the only ones to play today, however, and in this respect the other side was one ahead.

Bill Terry, New York; "Pie" Traynor, Pittsburgh, and Frank Frisch, St. Louis, played, while Bill McKechnie, of Boston, and Casey Stengle, Brooklyn, tossed in their moral support, which wasn't quite enough.

Bradley's Brother Joe Lasts to Beat Coequel's Spurt in Empire City Feature

Filly Makes Futile Dash Near End

Ted Husing Is Winner of First; My Selection Returns, Scores.

EMPIRE CITY RACE TRACK, July 10 (AP).—E. R. Bradley's Brother Joe was pushed to the limit to win the Briarcliff Purse of about 6 furlongs here today. Held at even money, and the third straight favorite to score, the black Toney horse just lasted to stave off the whirlwind finish of the Maemere Farm's gray filly, Coequel. The latter beat M. Vacarro's Johns Birthday by six lengths for the place. Brother Joe completed his short journey in 1:09 2-5.

Coequel had not appeared in public since running fifth in the Florida Derby last winter. The filly ran 6 furlongs in 1:10 1-5 at Hialeah Park and her recent trials had been fast, with the result that she was backed from 5 to 1 down to 13 to 5, or second choice in the betting.

Early Dizzy Pace.

The battle for early supremacy was brisk, with Kawagoe, Johns Birthday, Brother Joe and Coequel all helping to make a dizzy pace. Brother Joe began to draw away after rounding out of the backstretch. He opened up daylight upon entering the home lane, but Coequel, coming like a flash on the outside, was wearing down the winner in the final drive. Johns Birthday easily beat Kawagoe for the show.

Ted Husing was a real good thing in the 5-furlong dash for maiden juveniles that opened the card. Held at 7 to 10, the colt led virtually all the way, and though fading fast at the finish, he held on long enough to register by a half length.

Credulous Is Second.

Credulous closed with a burst of speed in the stretch and headed Cristate, another that finished fast, for the place. Overstimulate, the second choice, was far back throughout.

Another good thing was successful when My Selection, a juvenile, making his first start since last winter, outfooted a big band of youngsters at odds of even money. With little Cal Rainey in the saddle, the Knebelkamp color bearer jumped into a quick lead and never left the result in doubt, winning by three lengths. Warned Off forced most of the pace and managed to nose out Alaric, one that had a rough trip, for secondary honors.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, July 10.

Dear Al:

I am told that when this race plant opened a year ago last spring hardly one-fifth of those present had ever seen a flat horse race. I understand that more winning tickets were tossed on the ground than were cashed by those who bought them and that chiselers and touts who hopped up from Maryland soon had their pockets bulging—and not with ham sandwiches. I remember noticing the unnatural prices attached to winners at this course. The word went around the national turf circuit that the Rockingham crowd was just waiting to be "taken." You can write this in your hat, on your cuff or on the sole of your shoe, but the fact remains that Mr. Rockingham Race Fan might have paid to learn, but he knows his races now. He can dig as deep into a dope sheet as any of his Maryland colleagues. He says, "Oh, yeah," when one of the wise boys tries to tell him about Jockey Hughes' brother and displays a wad of phoney tickets. He wins and loses much after the fashion that has ben going on elsewhere for years and years. Moreover, he is getting good racing. With Massachusetts threatening to pass a race bill, New Hampshire is demanding clean horse play. BILL.

First race—Jay D. is a fairly consistent sort and gets in this with only 102 pounds. With this light assignment he hsa a good chance of taking the long and of this purpose. Unlawful and Grandpas Boy to take care of the others.

Second race—Oral has plent of speed and may jump to the front of these sprinters and lead to the finish. Lamp Black shapes up as the one to beat. Vacillate, an old Charles Town friend, for the show award.

Third race—Wise Count has the edge on this group. He has rounded into shape and will be ready to battle right down to the wire. Corrymeela comes from a stable full of fit ones and is dangerous. Luck In is cheap but arrived here in excellent shape and the short route should help.

Fourth race—I believe they will be chasing Star Chase at the finish of this juvenile dash. A promising youngster with plenty of hoof. Migrate will be ready to take the major portion of the pay-off if the top one makes mistakes. Sun Antioch for the show end.

Fifth race—Teralice seems better suited here than in the sixth for which she is also named. Gets only steadying weight and has the early foot to make the most of the abbreviated contest. Slapdash and Chinese Empress for the other places.

Sixth race—Sadara carries 118 pounds, but has a shade the best of it at a mile. Dark Winter favors the distance. Teralice for third in this field.

Seventh race—Brown Wisdom is fairly honest. One of those real races will take care of this group. Southard moves up, but is dongerous. Babeo to complete the money picture.

Eighth race—Kibitzer is in such rare shape that I'm taking him despite that 117-pound impost. Prince Tokalon and Kindacorn promise to give battle.

BROTHER JOE, away well, ran into lead turning out of back stretch, opened wide gap around turn, but weakened and had to be ridden out to win. COEQUAL was rated along back of the pace, came around field on turn and, finishing with a rush, would have won in a few more strides. JOHNS BIRTHDAY had plenty of speed and held on well. Buying Flurry Lifts Stocks Five-Tenths Market Moves Out of Rut as Trading Rises to 648,770 Shares.

New York, July 10 (AP).—A moderate flurry of buying stirred the stock market from its mid-year sleep today and lifted prices of active issues fractionally to about 3 points.

On the rise, trading expanded to more than double yesterday's ten-year record low volume. The total was 648,770 shares against 315,902.

Bulls were impatient for some action after the prolonged dullness of recent weeks and anxious to discount optimistic hopes for autumn business improvement.

Inflation-minded traders made capital out of the protest of Senator Thomas against any efforts at this time to stabilize the dollar in relation to the British pound. The dollar was not appreciably disturbed by the protest, although it eased off a shade against European currencies.

Leading shares responded readily to a modest influx of buying orders after the opening. American Can, Continental Can, Santa Fe, American Telephone, U. S. Steel common and Chrysler were prominent on the upturn and finished a point or so higher.

Gold shares came back into the limelight on the dollar stabilization discussion. Alaska Juneau and McIntyre picked up gains of more than a point. Homestake hit a new peak at 425, up 4.

Several new highs were added to the record, among them American Sugar, Lily-Tulip, Coca Cola, U. S. Tobacco and Monsanto Chemical, all of which pushed up 1 to 2 points.

The buying flurry subsided toward midday and the market resumed its slow drift. Omission of the stock dividend on Columbia Gas & Electric common stock, which lost nearly 2 points, helped to take the edge off the early advance.

June U. S. Steel shipments at 985,337 tons, up 240,274 from May, were the highest for any month since March, 1930. Automobile output in the United States and Canada last month was estimated at 328,000 units, the largest for that period in four years. For the first six months motor production showed a gain of about 75 per cent above that of the corresponding period last year.

Bonds continued to creep forward under leadership of United States Government issues as large reserves of investment funds and bank resources competed for outlet there.

Robey's Review

Indefiniteness of the Price-Fixing Policy of NRA Is a Disturbing Factor to Business; Immediate Clarification Needed.

By Ralph West Robey.

In spite of the apparent strides that have been taken in the last few weeks to get price-fixing out of NRA codes, the actual situation except in the service industries seems to be about where it was when the first order was issued. Whether this is the result of administrative delay within the NRA in formulating a program, of objections by those business interests immediately concerned, or of a major internal conflict on matters of policy, is not known. Unless the NRA is to remain an element of uncertainty throughout the summer, nevertheless, it is esential that the issue be clarified immediately.

The first general order against price-fixing, as contrasted with the action on the service industries, was issued June 7. At the time it appeared perfectly clear. Price-fixing provisions were not to be included in any future codes, and NRA was to start at once revising existing codes with a view of bringing them into line with the new policy. Almost before the ink was dry on the order, however, it was a cause of trouble. Various industries interpreted it as freeing them from existing code prices and consequently started to offer goods at below the prices they had filed with the code authority.

Business Men Objected to Price Cutting Under Order.

This caused an immediate storm of protest from those business units that wanted to maintain the code prices. In consequence Gen. Johnson stepped in and on June 9 issued a statement saying that this declaration of policy did not release business men from their code provisions. Such release, he said, could come only by specific authorization from NRA. In the meantime the code provisions would remain in full force.

That was a month ago. To date, at least insofar as the public has been informed, no industry has been freed from the price-fixing provisions.

In the meantime, too, codes have been put in force that included the price-fixing provision. On June 20, President Roosevelt signed the cigar manufacturers code. It contained such provisions. On last Monday the baking industry started to operate under a code containing price-fixing provisions.

Neither as to the elimination of price fixing from codes made after June 7 nor as to revising existing codes, therefore, does it appear that this first order has been other than a dead letter.

Second Order Referred to Government Contract Bids.

The second great antiprice-fixing order was issued by President Roosevelt on June 29. It provided that henceforth business men could quote prices on Government contracts up to 15 per cent under those filed with the code authority. As soon as the bids were opened these new prices must be filed with the code authority. It was explained by the President that this filing would mean that the public would get the benefit of such reductions.

According to press dispatches, however, the order as interpreted by NRA means no such thing. All it provides is that prices may be cut by as much as 15 per cent to the Government. Such cutting need not be passed along to the public.

Here, too, then, it appears that the effectiveness of the order from the point of view of getting rid of the troublesome and unsound price-fixing provisions of codes has been emasculated. The door, that apparently gave an out to those business units that desired to reduce prices, has been closed.

What the ultimate outcome of all this confusion will be is open to question. It is to be hoped that the price-fixing is brought to an end. But whether or not this is the ultimate outcome, it is imperative to put an end to these inconsistencies. They are an even greater handicap to business recovery than price-fixing itself.

Bonds Climb Two-tenths in Quiet Trading

Federals Maintain Leadership; Sales Volume Rises to $12,528,000.

News Is Constructive.

Most of the day's news apparently was interpreted as moderately constructive, although the pressure of idle funds was still the principal market influence.

The proposed sale of $72,000,000 of New York City bonds was not consummated because the authorities considered the banking bids too low.

Ten Treasury loans recorded their usual "new highs" for the past year or longer with gains of 2-32ds to 9-32ds of a point. The 3¼s of 1941 were the most active. One block of $1,000,000 of these changed hands at an advance of 6-32ds.

There was a fair demand for home-owners loan mortgage obligations, the four issues firming 2-32 to 13-32 of a point.

While corporation bonds of the prime categories held around their peaks for the past several years, they were not as active as the secondary groups.

List of Gainers.

Gainers of fractions to around a point included some loans of Alleghany Corporation, American Water Works, Armour & Co., Canadian Pacific, Certain-teed, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Chile Copper, Columbia Gas, Erie, Great Northern, Hudson Coal, Illinois Central, Mead Corporation, National Dairy, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, North American Edison, Postal Telegraph, Union Pacific, Wabash, Western Pacific and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

German Central Agricultural Bank issues rallied a point or more, but the Young and Dawes plan bonds were just about steady. Some loans of Norway were off 1 to around 2 points.

Dried Fruits Steady.

Curb's Prices Pushed Higher; Trading Rises

New York, July 10 (AP).—The curb market attained moderately higher price levels today. The improvement was accompanied by an expansion of the trading volume in the early hours.

However, dealings tapered in the afternoon. Total sales approximated 153,000 shares, compared with yesterday's record low of 80,000.

Variations were mainly fractional. A few specialties rose a point or more. Aluminum Co. of America gained 3½ points on a small turnover. Gulf Oil, Pan American Airways and Swift International finished around a point higher.

Sherwin Williams recorded a new 1934 high to close up a major fraction. Hiram Walker, Swift & Co., Wright Hargreaves, Electric Bond and Share, Lake Shore and Greyhound Corporation ended with quotations unchanged to slightly higher. Newmont Mining slipped a minor fraction.

Goods Markets.

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Prices were firm in cotton goods today, but buying was small. Rayon sales were of moderate volume with more attention paid to spun-rayon types for dress wear. Satins and taffetas in silks sold in fair quantities. Plaid weaves did well. Tweed effects in dress materials were in demand for fall with a number of plaid designs doing well. Burlaps were easier and quiet.

Leading Farm Products Touch Slightly Lower Levels in July

Generally Weak Commodity Markets and Summer Lag in Business Activity Follow; Grain, Feed and Cotton Prices Pushed Down.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.)

Most leading farm products reached slightly lower price levels the first ten days of July in line with generally weak commodity markets, attended by summer lag in business activity.

Grain, feed and cotton prices were weakened a little by rather better crop conditions. Live stock markets felt the effect of ample supplies and the slow demand usual at the season. Butter declined further below the former 25-cent level and cheese prices lost another small fraction.

Egg markets were among the few strong features, some grades showing price advances. Production tends to decrease at this season and supplies of strictly choice stock are moderate. Poultry markets are irregular. Most vegetables sold lower under increasing local supplies. Apples declined from the high opening prices.

Prices of spot cotton declined a fraction on reports of rain in the Southwest and unsettled political and economic conditions in Germany. Activity in cotton and cotton cloth markets was reported somewhat reduced due in part to the holiday and hot weather conditions. Exports were smaller than during the corresponding time a year ago. New England and Southern mill centers reported a quiet period with some mills closed. Inquiries for raw cotton in Southern and Eastern mill markets were reported slightly diminished. Cloth prices were virtually unchanged in the New York wholesale cloth markets, although sales were very small.

Domestic wheat markets were bearly steady the first ten days of July, influenced by continued heavy marketings of winter wheat and some improvement in spring wheat prospects. Private estimates reckoned the domestic crop slightly larger than was expected earlier in the season. Premiums for protein have become small as a result of the plentiful supply of high protein grain. Soft winter wheat was in active demand. Spring wheat markets were barely steady. Durum prices held about unchanged. Rye markets were easier despite light offerings and unfavorable new crop prospects.

Demand was quiet and prices declined about 1 cent per bushel. Feed grain markets were barely steady during the week as the result of improved prospects for corn, but the situation is much firmer than a year ago with rapidly diminishing old crop supplies and prospects of only a moderate crop of corn and very short harvests of oats and barley. Oats and barley markets were independently firm.

Rich feeds remained firm with only small quantities of linseed and soybean meal available and stocks of cottonseed meal sharply reduced by increased shipments to drought areas. Hominy feed was weak and lower with offerings in excess of current market needs.

Gluten supplies were ample but prices were shifted to the July basis, which is 50 cents per ton over June quotations. Alfalfa meal was firmer but other feeds remained about unchanged.

The price spread on slaughter steers was the widest of the season, the extreme top on choice medium-weight bullocks repeating the season's peak of $10.40 recorded the previous month. Strong weight cattle continued to command price premiums over lighter weights. Stocker and feeder cattle supply was fully as large as the demand. Prices on the lower grades of thin, dry-weather cattle have receded during the past fortnight to price levels comparable with those prevailing when the drought situation was most severe.

Riggs Bank Votes Dividend Requirements

Returns on Common and Preferred Are Regular; 2 Payments Each.

Following the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Riggs National Bank, held yesterday, Mr. Robert V. Fleming, president of the bank, stated that the regular common dividend had been declared payable $2 per share on July 16, 1934, to stockholders of record June 30, 1934, and $2 per share payable October 15, 1934, to stockholders of record September 29, 1934.

Mr. Fleming also stated that the dividend on the preferred stock of $2.50 per share for the period February 1, 1934, to August 1, 1934, had been declared payable August 1, 1934, to stockholders of record June 30, 1934, on all preferred stock other than that which had been purchased by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. On preferred stock purchased by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. Fleming stated that a dividend at the rate of $2.50 per share had been declared payable August 1, 1934, for the period February 1 to March 31, 1934, and $2 per share for the period April 1, to August 1, 1934, in accordance with the reduction in the rate of dividend granted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation effective as of April 1, 1934, through March 31, 1939.

Directors of Best & Co., a department store, today declared a dividend of 37½ cents on the common stock, payable August 15 to stock of record July 25. In previous quarters the company paid 25 cents.

Tri-Continental Corporation reports net assets of $40,240,918, as of June 30, equal to $5,304 per $1,000 debenture bond, $125.21 a share on preferred stock and $2.70 a share on common stock outstanding in the hands of the public. This compares with net assets of $36,720,082, equal to $4,839 per $1,000 debenture, $111.71 a preferred share and $1.25 a common share as of December 31, 1933.

Although its operating revenue dropped but slightly to $1,990,708 for the year ended March 31, expenses of Lexington Water Power Co. increased $314,792 over last year. This was because of the fact that during this period, due to extreme drought conditions late in 1933 and early in 1934, the company was compelled to purchase unusually large amounts of electricity under its contracts.

Directors of the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. have ordered an extra dividend of 50 cents and a quarterly disbursement of 50 cents, both payable August 15 to stock of record August 4. A 50-cent payment was authorized three months ago. On February 15, 1934, stockholders were paid 50 cents, including an extra of 25 cents.

Wider Buying Drives Wheat Values Higher

Government's Crop Report Aids Price Advance; All Grains Up.

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Better general buying, associated with correct forecasts the Government crop report this afternoon would prove bullish, helped decidedly to lift prices of grain futures today.

A striking feature of the official crop figures issued after the close of trading was that the U. S. 1934 estimated total yield of wheat aggregated only 483,662,000 bushels, compared with July 1 private estimates averaging 516,000,000 bushels.

Announcement that the Washington Administration would continue its wheat acreage curtailment program if other exporting nations would cut production did much to stimulate today's price gains. Furthermore, the movement of new wheat in domestic winter crop territory fell off to a material extent, and there were less optimistic reports current regarding the spring wheat outlook on both sides of the Canadian border.

Wheat closed unsettled at a moderate reaction from the day's top but ⅞ to ¼ above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅞ to 1⅛ up; oats, varying from ⅜ decline to ¾ gain, and provisions showing a rise of 7 to 15 cents.

Brisk upturns of cotton and securities were notable factors at times in promoting strength of wheat values, and so, too, was firmness of the Liverpool market, together with reports that rationing of bread and potatoes in Germany would be necessitated by September. Tending further to hoist wheat prices was notice taken of reported large purchases of wheat by Russia for military use in Siberia.

Regina, Saskatchewan, advices said deterioration of wheat crop prospects were expected without general rains soon or with a few hot days. Winnipeg wired that last week's frost in Canada was more extensive and did more damage than was at first reported.

Receipts of wheat today at 11 domestic winter crop markets totaled 1,443 cars. Kansas City wired that the peak of the winter wheat movement in that section had passed.

Corn and oats rose with wheat, and as a result of complaints of damage from hot weather Southwest and in Nebraska.

Provisions reflected strength shown by grains and were also influenced by prospective reduced output of cottonseed oil this season.

Paris—Quotations were heavy in an inactive session on the bourse today. Rentes sagged on new rumors that the Government planned to float a loan and the majority of the list followed in sympathy. Rubber shares held firm. The closing was heavy.

Sugar Futures Move Upward During Week

Coffee Advances After Cuts; Gains of 4 to 11 Points Are Recorded.

New York, July 10.—Sugar futures moved into new high ground during the week under review on news that a new commercial treaty with Cuba, which it is expected will increase her preferential to 50 per cent, will be signed possibly by August 3.

July 23 has been set for the start of hearings. At present Cuba's duty is 1.50 cents, or 20 per cent less than the 1.87½ cents full duty.

If Cuba's preferential should be increased to 50 per cent, the duty would drop to 0.9375 cents per pound. The week ended with futures losing a point or two and the net result showed the market up 1 to 3 points. In the raw market offerings were firm up until Friday when holders revised their offers a point or two. Cubas were on offer at the end at 1.70 to 1.75, while Puerto Ricos were obtainable at 3.18. St. Croix sugars sold at 3.15, unchanged from last week.

Cuban Production.

Cuban production to June 30 is estimated at 2,192,000 tons or about 95 per cent of the decreed crop, 2,315,000 tons. Twelve Cuban centrals still continue to grind. In London raws were better selling at the equivalent of 0.98 cents f. o. b. Cuba compared with 0.97 cents last week.

Coffee.

Coffee futures, after a further loss of 10 to 30 points on Monday, moved higher not only recovered all the early losses, but showed gains of 4 to 11 points in the Santos contract and 6 to 11 points in the Rio contract.

News that destruction was continuing at an increased rate and reports of cold weather in Brazil were bullish features. Destruction in Brazil during the last half of June amounted to 702,000 bags, the highest half-monthly total since last September.

The total destroyed since the beginning in 1931 now amounts to 29,141,000 bags. World consumption figures released during the week show 24,452,480 bags for the crop year, the largest total with one exception and a gain of 7 per cent over the previous season.

World's Visible Supply.

The local spot market continues to reflect the fact that roasters have been drawing on supplies built up during the winter months, but the trade feels that with the start of the heavy consuming season in the fall "invisible" stocks will be low and another good buying move will materialize.

The world's visible supply on July 1 amounted to 8,525,899 bags exclusive of restricted stocks in Brazil compared with 8,563,533 on June 1 and 6,139,970 on July 1 last year. Santos 4s in the local spot market were quoted at 10½c as the week ended.

West Coast Bank Debts.

San Francisco, July 10 (AP).—Bank debts on the Pacific Slope were about 10 per cent higher in June than in the same month a year ago, in spite of the hindrance of the shipping strike, statistics turned out by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco disclosed.

Yankee Again Victor Over Rainbow

Boston Craft Gets Off to Poor Start but Wins by 5 Minutes.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 10 (AP).—Yankee, Boston's aspirant for the honor of defending the America's Cup, today soundly trounced Rainbow, arold S. Vanderbilt's newly constructed candidate, leading her around a 28½-mile triangle by 5 minutes and 27 seconds.

It was the second time in the trial series that Yankee met Rainbow and on each occasion the Vanderbilt craft finished in her wake.

The Boston boat's victory was especially convincing because she got off to a poor start. She came to the starting line prematurely and was forced to run down it, leaving the winward berth to her rival.

In spite of this disadvantage, Yankee's skipper, Charles Francis Adams, drove her through Rainbow's lee to round a torpedo range buoy off Sakonnet, marking the end of the first leg of 8½ miles, 2 minutes and 17 second in the lead.

Chick Adams thickened the gratuitous coat of shellack on each of the two succeeding legs. Yankee increased her lead to 3 minutes and 32 seconds on the 13 miles to the whistling buoy off Point Judith and added almost 2 minutes to it on the 7 miles back to the finish line, to win by a very comfortable margin of 5 minutes, 27 seconds.

McGraw Honored At All-Star Game

Polo Grounds, New York, July 10.—It was fitting and proper that a bronze plaque honoring the memory of the late John McGraw, former Giant manager, should be unveiled today before the start of the All-Star game, for just 32 years ago today the immortal "Mugsy" signed his first contract with the Giants.

There are three other memorial tablets in this park, more than in any other stadium in the country. One honors Christy Mathewson, another Ross Young and the third Capt. Edward Leslie Grant, mortally wounded in the World War at the Argonne. All are former Giant players.

Kalola, at $13.20, Wins Detroit Feature Race

Detroit, July 10 (AP).—Favorites fared poorly in the early races on today's Michigan State Fair grounds card. In the best race, a six furlong affair for 3-year-olds and up, Kalola, ignored in the handicapping, nosed out a victory over Scythe, which finished a length and a half ahead of Good Scout.

Kalola, a 4-year-old, which attracted only a small amount of backing on the pari-mutuels, led all the way until Scythe caught up with her about 50 yards from the finish. She got up again, however, just in time to push her nose in front of Scythe at the finish. Kalola paid $13.20 for a $2 ticket.

Thistle Ace, paying $17.80 on the machines, captured the third race as six furlongs.

Gay Monarch Easy Victor at Arlington

Arlington Park, Ill., July 10 (AP).—Running over a sloppy track, A. C. Schwartz's Gay Monarch galloped to an easy victory in the Great Lakes handicap here today.

The Corsicana Stable's Blessed Event finished third in the three-quarter dash.

Gay Monarch ran the distance in 1:12 4-5, paying $5.60 in the mutuels.

Code Violations Charged to Oil Firm by Board

Ickes Gets Complaint That Company Violated Rights of Labor.

A Texas and Oklahoma oil company yesterday was asked to refrain from any further efforts to secure the establishment of its own company employes' union against the will of its wage earners.

In a report to Oil Administrator Ickes, the Petroleum Labor Policy Board charged that the Phillips Oil Co. had violated the oil code by interfering with its employes by forcing them to accept the company union plan of organization.

The board's statement said the action followed an investigation into numerous complaints from employes at the Phillips plants at Borger and Pampa, Tex., and Seminole, Okla.

The board advised Mr. Ickes that it had found that in two elections sponsored by the company on a plan for forming an employes' association, employes were given no oppodtunity to express themselves on any other form of organization.

Charge Unfair Vote.

"They had to vote for or against the company's proposal, which company officials endeavored to impose on the employes," the statement read.

The board said if a proper election could not be arranged it would conduct the election itself.

With respect to a company union, the board held:

"It is for the employes freely to choose such an organization if they prefer it, and any election that purports to give employes an opportunity to express their choice must provide an opportunity for the employes to vote on as many organizations or representatives as the employes may want to choose from, and must not be confined or restricted to a vote on the employer's proposal alone.

Ask Secret Ballot.

"The election should be by secret ballot, and must not be conducted by an agent of the company. It would be supervised b yan election committee chosen by the employes and representatives of different organizations among them, or by a neutral party agreed upon by all parties.

"If this can not be arranged, the Petroleum Labor Policy Board will conduct the election. Only in this manner can a fair and free choice of the employes be secured as to the organizations or individuals they desire to represent them in collective bargaining."

D. C. National Guard "Saves" Virginia Town

Hills and Entrances to Winchester Are Defended.

Winchester, Va., July 10 (Spl.).—Winchester, which was in the center of some of the hottest battles between the North and the South during the War Between the States, was defended today against a modern "foe" by the 260th Coast Artillery, District of Columbia National Guard.

In sharp contrast to the sanguinary battles of the sixties, the realism of which is manifest today in a score of service burial grounds which dot the countryside, the foe today was imaginary and, unlike the battles of the North-South conflict, there were no casualties.

Today's "battle" was part of the field maneuvers of the District of Columbia guardsmen who began their operations last Saturday with a defense of the terrain surrounding Shenandoah Caverns near Mount Jackson. Sunday the maneuvers were continued at Mount Jackson and yesterday similar activities were continued at Elizabeth Furnace, Shenandoah County.

"Advance" on Winchester.

After a "defense" of Front Royal and Riverton this morning, the guardsmen moved upon Winchester, carrying out carefully laid plans for their "advance" upon this city of 12,000 population. Various hills and entrances to the city were successfully defended against the "enemy" while many of the city's residents watched.

The guardsmen camped here tonight and tomorrow morning will move on to the "defense" of Charles Town, W. Va.

The outfit is motorized with 32 trucks conveying men and equipment. They have in their equipment three high-powered searchlights, antiaircraft guns and full field equipment. Two rolling kitchens supply meals and a rolling machine ship keeps the equipment in condition.

Among the Army officers accompanying the field march are Col. John O. Oehmann, commanding officer of the District National Guard; Maj. L. McD. Sylvester, senior instructor; Maj. J. R. Lusby, U. S. P. and D. officer; Maj. Sidney Morgan, inspector general, District of Columbia National Guard; Capt. C. R. Roberts, U. S. Coast Artillery; Maj. J. S. Sinclair, U. S. Coast Artillery inspector; Second Lieut. Edgar Chase, Fortress Monroe.

Twenty-five officers and 260 men are on the trip. The officers include Maj. Walter W. Burns, commanding officer; Capt. LeRoy S. Mann; adjutant; Second Lieut. A. B. C. Graves, planning and training officer; Capt. William J. Heale, commanding officer headquarters detachment and combat train; Second Lieut. Carl Cantille, supply officer; Maj. Stewart M. Grayson, commanding officer medical department detachment; Capt. S. Ross Taggart, M. C., medical officer, and Capt. John McIntyre, M. C., dental officer.

Battery A, searchlight division, has Capt. C. W. Royston, commanding, and Second Lieut. James Heizer; Battery B, 3-inch antiaircraft rifle has Capt. Rex P. Mulligan, commanding; First Lieut. Lee J. Rutz and Second Lieut. Walter C. Jordan, camp supply officer; Battery C, 3-inch antiaircraft rifle, has Capt. Perry O. Huff, commanding, and second Lieut. James E. Anglers, mess officer, and Battery E, machine guns and antiaircraft, has First Lieut. Max G. Prentice, commanding, and Second Lieut. James Votava.

Easton, Md., July 10 (Spl.).—Talbot County farmers will receive $50,563 from the Federal Government for having reduced their wheat acreage this year, the report of Thomas B. Symons, director of the Maryland State Extension Service states. There were 27,006 acres under contract.
